The Guard editorially and in a recent write up of Bohemia, is profuse in its remarks relative to Eugene monopolizing the trade of the Bohemia mining district. It contends that "the point is now reached which is vital to Eugene and its interests." For years, while the camp was going through its ups and downs in its experimental stage, Eugene was repeatedly asked to do something in the way of subscriptions to assist in the building of good roads—Eugene, the county seat of Lane county, was asked many times to subscribe for road improvements, but such petitions were given, with few exceptions the "Marble Hart," and those interested in the mines had to fall back upon Cottage Grove and its surrounding inhabitants for the aid required. Twice in the history of the camp the county court has aided in the construction of roads, be it said to its credit; but Eugene is entitled to no credit for that. But the miners have been diligent and the people of Cottage Grove have seen the necessity and aided the various enterprises in every possible way within their power, while Eugene, wrapped in its selfishness, dreamed the pleasing dream, that if the mines ever did amount to anything, there was plenty of time to "cop off" the business therefrom, after the sturdy miners with what aid Cottage Grove could give them, brought to the surface the merits of the camp. No doubt it was a pleasant dream; but dreams and air castles are seldom realized. Eugene's right to try and get trade from the mines is not denied, but the assertion that Eugene has a "just right" to the trade of Bohemia, over and above that of any other town, Cottage Grove in particular, is so ridiculous that it is not worthy of repudiation. Eugene isn't "the only" town in Orenon, or even in Lane county, and that which makes Eugene what she is today, is contributed to a considerable extent, from this end of the county in the matter of taxes. Take away the state's contribution to Eugene in the way of university appropriations, and the county seat, and Eugene wouldn't have very much to boast of after all, and its difficult to see by what right Eugene is entitled to Bohemia support when practically she has not laid out a dollar in the way of assistance to the miners. It is dead easy to talk railroad and wagon road building in a newspaper but that doesn't meet the expense account. The Guard seems to be of the opinion that all Eugene would have to do would be to open up a route to Bohemia and the mine owners would flock there by the score, to do their trading—would be compelled to, from the fact that Eugene has a "right" to the business. This is amusing! It is fair to presume that the miners also have a "right" to trade where they see fit, and as the majority of the mine owners are deeply interested in or near Cottage Grove, it is quite possible that Eugene would fail to get several dimes of the pay roll which looks so big in the eyes of the Guard man. Again, say nothing of the money subscribed by Cottage Grove people to road building, mine owners have spent vast amounts of money and time on the road, and they have made, in many instances calculations upon doing their business at Cottage Grove. Of course, through Eugene's "right" to hog, they might become "subjects," but its quite likely they will have something to say about it. It is amusing to hear the Eugene paper burn its fuse on the railroad building proposition, especially when it is a known fact that Eugene grew to be known as an old town before enterprise was strong enough to stir the municipality into grading Willamette street. Of course Eugene can do many things, but by way of a reminder it might be suggested that she has now one railroad to the Siuslaw, on paper, and that it would be well to finish that before putting its great gobs of surplus money into the Bohemia railroad deal; and perhaps it would be well to donate a few of the many thousands only waiting a chance to go into the railroad business, into making travel by wagon more convenient over the Glenada road. Eugene has exhibited considerable enterprise of late years and to that extent is certainly to be commended, and we don't deny her right to honest effort in procuring business; but in as much as she is seeking business, and in as much as Cottage Grove has good roads thoroughly established, let the county seat town move up here and get her share of it. However, if Eugene wants a railroad to Bohemia and wants to be at the tail end of it, it might be well for her to move to Portland as soon as this branch road connects with the S. P. line. It is preposterous to think that a railroad connecting with the Southern Pacific can result in a supply point other than Portland.
