The Salem Statesman is now making arrangements to perfect a delivering system enabling the management to deliver the Morning Statesman to its patrons within a radius of twenty miles each morning before breakfast. Good. Another progressive step taken. The Statesman is full of 'em. Keep a stepping.

On the morning of December 1 the Morning Eugene Register presented itself to the public, in seven columns, four page form. It is bright newsy and snappy, and while in our opinion a five or six column morning paper would give better results, still we are exceedingly well pleased with the initial number and predict and hope for its success. Every republican should give it a lift.

W. C. Conner, well known here and at one time connected with the Leader under Mr. Thorp, and who has been for several months managing editor of the Roseburg Plaindealer, has retired from that paper and is at present running his job office in Roseburg. Mr. Conner is a good faithful worker, and rated among the best county newspaper men of the state of Oregon. We hope to see him in the midst of journalistic work again before long.

MR. MOODY AND PRESIDENT MCKINLEY.

The new chapel at Northfield, built with Mr. Moody's recent birthday gift of $6,000, has been opened. An inscription in the tribune records that "This chapel erected by the united contributions of Christian friends in and the United States."

Mr. Campbell Moody, on this occasion Mr. Moody in requesting prayer on behalf of America, gave testimony to the high character of the American statesmen in these words:

Last year, when the war with Spain was in progress, we had many prayers for our land. I think we ought to pray for those who govern it. I believe we have got the best land under the sun. We have the best government in the world, with as able men in control as we have ever had. I believe that the man in the White House today is as able as any ruler that we have ever had. He is an earnest Christian man, and lives near to God. He needs our prayers and the prayers of all Christian people. I believe that our congress is made up for the most part of noble men of God. There is no parliament in the world that contains so many godly men as our Senate and House of Representatives. It is folly to wait till a man has been dead fifty years before you recognize his worth. The men that have represented this district in Congress for the last fifty years have nearly all been upright and honorable men. Let us not spend our time in grumbling, but rather thank God for the good men whom He has raised up to govern this land.

COTTAGE GROVE.

The Salem Statesman Prints the Observations of a Salemite.

The beautiful and prosperous little city of Cottage Grove is situated in the southern part of Lane county, 23 miles from Eugene, the county seat, and 93 miles from Salem on the line of the Southern Pacific railroad. The city is located in a small valley through which flows the east fork of the Willamette and is surrounded by low mountains. At the present time it contains a population of about 1300 and is in every respect an up-to-date, wide-awake enterprising community.

Building still continues during the winter and the sound of the saw and the hammer may be heard in every part of the town. There are few idle men here, as the Booth-Kelley mills and the Bohemia mining district furnish employment for many who have their homes here. Many show windows are filled with mineral specimens and almost every family you visit has specimens of mineral and curios from the mines.

The people are unusually happy and hopeful, and rejoice in their abundant prosperity.

The country surrounding the city is hilly—many hills rising to the dignity of mountains. The lower hills make excellent pastures for stock while the valleys are fine grass, grain and vegetable land.

The higher mountains are covered with excellent timber which will be a source of vast revenue to this section. Stock raising is the principal industry at present—sheep, cattle, and goats, being the leading stock.

More than a score of years ago the writer of this article predicted that goat raising would become an important industry in this region as goats were the best adapted for the brushy lands of these hills and now he is gratified to find so many engaging in the business; almost every rancher is talking about goats.

The writer has been out in every section—climbing hills and mountains, and studying the capabilities of the firmly con-and goats. Turkeys, geese, and these healthy mountain fowls are abundant and stock of all kinds in good condition and every person wears a broad smile while gold and goats is the principal topic of conversation around his cheerful fire these wintry evenings and rainy days.

Notice the big ads in this week's issue of Bohemia Nugget. It shows that the wide-awake business men have learned in less than a year to appreciate the advertising columns of this paper. The Nugget reaches the best people in this section of Oregon—the people who are prosperous—the people who have the cash to buy goods. Keep your eye on the business men of any community and you will note in an incredibly short time that the man who uses printers ink is a success in business.

If you want extra fine material for your mince meat go to Eakin & Bristow. They always have the best.
