EVEN YEAR.

PEOPLE "get growing older"

I am my own age,.

New Year's Day is an Old Man's Day.

I can't help but notice

Deep snow covers the ground

Certainly there must be

It is a beast.

In these parts, they say there is

He is a brute.

Not to be had to see.

On the other hand, you may

The year goes on

The last breath

The true life dies.

The barn yard dog claps his paws and the barn swallow chirps her song.

and the barnyard rooster crows his song.

and the barnyard hen crows her song.

The HIGHWAYMAN'S CHRISTMAS PRESENT

REPEATED episodes of the stage coach which made a weekly trip from Fort Valley, Va., to Chatsworth, Ga., were the scene of much excitement on Christmas Day, 1856. It was on that day that the stage coach was robbed.

Early in the morning, the stage coach was on its way from Fort Valley to Chatsworth. It was carrying cargo and passengers. The stage coach had just left Fort Valley when it was stopped by four men dressed in black.

The robbers demanded that the coach driver hand over all the money and cargo on board. The driver complied, and the robbers quickly fled with the loot.

The stage coach continued its journey to Chatsworth, where it arrived safely. The robbers were never caught, and the stage coach company never recovered the lost money and cargo.

This effectively breaks the end of the text.
