This, the 52nd number of Bohemia Nugget, closes the first year of the history of a paper started under not too flattering circumstances, but the prospects of which have grown brighter each month of its existence. Not a week in the year now dead has passed that new names have not been added to the subscription list of the Bohemia Nugget. Today it is recognized as your leading home paper, not only from the amount of advertising space consumed by advertisers, but by the class whose names honor our list. We have sought only the best of subscribers and on this point the management is satisfied. The Nugget goes into the homes of the best families in the vicinity in which it exists, It enjoys a fairly good county circulation—as good as any, and we are satisfied better than some, outside of the Eugene Guard and Register. The Nugget's advertising patronage has increased, both local and foreign, and in a manner highly satisfactory. It has been the Nugget's policy to give the local news and in this it has not failed. We wish to extend our thanks to those who have seen fit to aid us, and to our patrons who have given us a pretty goodly list of subscribers. We have a solid and loyal following and have steam up for another year, and we will improve and increase the value of the paper.

Every republican should be out next Thursday night at the Cottage Grove republican club meeting. Delegates will be elected to the State Republican league.

The American's now at Manila are said to have introduced a waltz known as "Aguinaldo's March." It is quite probable that it is mostly made up of "runs."

Every voter should bear in mind that under the new registration law now in force, they must register before they can vote. This is imperative, and every man who values his ballot should comply.

It is understood that the Long property adjoining the depot property has changed hands. It is said that the beautiful grove which is a part of the property is to be platted and sold for residence and business lots. The city of Cottage Grove should look into to matter and if possible should secure the five or six acres with the view of converting it into public property. It would make an admirable park and the day is not far distant when the rapid growth of the city will demand such an investment.

SHOULD BREAK ROCK.
Cottage Grove, Ore., Jan. 8 1900.
ED NUGGET: I see in last week's Nugget a suggestion in the editorial columns, that is worthy of fair trial and I desire to express my hearty support of the same. You suggest that the element quite well known on our streets, and occasionally—semi-occasionally of late—getting into trouble and making no end of trouble to our citizens, be made to work out their fines by breaking rock for the streets. Cottage Grove needs about as much street repairing as any town I know of and it seems to me that it would be a splendid idea to adopt some such a plan. It would serve to keep some of the boys of this town who are a little wild and yet endowed with some manhood, in check, and rather than with no manhood, at least as well gravel a block of street for us between the depot and the school house. I am for one a CITIZEN.

HEARTHEART.
The darling little 8-year-old girl of Mr. and Mrs. [Name] of this city, after an illness of nearly a month with typhoid fever, the outgrowth of a two month's illness with malaria, yielded the slender, golden thread of life and crushed the life from out a father's and a mother's loving heart, Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. Zuna was the oldest of a cluster of four bright children, and in her departure for the home of God's bright jewels she leaves a father crushed with sorrow a mother broken of heart and passes from the out stretched and imploring arms of three tiny sisters, who miss the little mother of the group.

The funeral was held at the family residence on Wall street Wednesday at 1 o'clock p. m. Rev. M. O. Brink officiating. A sea of beautiful flowers rested on the coffin and followed God's treasure to the grave.

Through a flood of tears, as the crumbling earth struck upon the casket, I wonder why those of us who have well nigh run the sands of life may not be called to go instead of those just budding into the flower of life, encircling us with their tiny yet strong arms of sweet affection—and I turned away, and looked into the blue of heaven for God's bright light, for a long time.

Fresh disaster seems to be the gist of the cablegrams relative to the British in the Transval war. War is a fearful thing, but it is gratifying to Americans to know that other nations make mistakes as well as we in massing an army and putting it into service.

It costs money to get out special mining editions. The Nugget has several hundred copies of one still on hand. The management fee's that the paper has done its share to place the great mineral wealth of this section before the public, now the citizens can do the rest—and it is commendable in them to do it—by buying a few copies each and sending them to friends. Come gentlemen and take them off our hands. We want to get even on this deal.

PRIMER THINSPACE.
