OLD TIMES.

There are no days like the good old

The days when we were youthful! When humankind were pure of mind And speech and deeds were truthful; Before a love for sordid gold Because man's roling passion,

And before each dame and maid became Slaves to the tyrant fashion.

There are no girls like the good old girls-Against the world I'd stake 'em As buxon and smart and clean of heart As the Lord knew how to make 'em! They were rich in spirit and common A piecy all-supportin';

They could bake and brew, and had taught school, too,
And they made the likeliest courtin'!

There are no boys like the good old boys-When we were boys together!

When the grass was sweet to the brown bare feet That dimpled the laughing heather; When the pewee sung to the summer

Of the bee in the willowy clover, Or down by the mill the whip-poor-will Echoed his night song over.

There is no love like the good old love-The love that mother gave us! We are old, old men, yet we pine again For that precious grace God gave us!

So we dream and dream of the good old times. And our hearts grow tenderer, fonder, As those dear old dreams bring soothing glezms Of heaven away off yonder. -Eugene Field.

*********

A LATIN LESSON. *********

T was a year since he had left Chicago, and in all that time she had heard nothing from him. It seemed strange! they had been such friendsindeed, more than friends, for he had seemed to like her much, and had sought her society on every possible oceasion. The day before he was to leave be had come by appointment to see her. She had noticed with concern that his manner was chill and constrained, but had had no opportunity to dissipate that chill by her own cordiality. Although it was not their regular reception day, the drawing-room was full of people, and her sister, who was apt upon occasion to monopolize his attention, never left them alone for a moment, although he prolonged his stay until after the last visitor had left. "Surely he will write," she had said to berself, and for weeks the postman's ring had caused a quick fluttering of the heart which subsided into the dull ache of disappointment when the longed-for letter never came. She had heard of him often from common friends, of his success socially and financially in the distant city which he had made his home, and had slowly and unwillingly resigned herself to the conviction that their friendship had been but an episode. And now she held in her hand the announcement of his marriage to another woman. She felt glad that the family had regarded him as her sister's admirer

SHE HAD NOT BEEN MISTAKEN; HE HAD LOVED HER AFTER ALL.

Slowly she went upstairs to her room and unlocked her desk, taking from an inner drawer a small stock of treasures -a dozen notes, some dried violets, candy box, ribbons, and other souvenirs equally trifling. She must destroy them now, she was too old-fashioned to preserve such memorials of another woman's husband. Violets and ribbons were soon in ashes on the hearth, but each note in the packet was opened and read before being sacrificed. She was naturally methodical and they came in correct order. She smiled bitterly to herself to see how little there was really in them. Even Mrs. Bardell's lawyer would have been puzzled to find on those pages anything tender or committal. What a fool she had been! She finished the holocaust and turned to replace the empty drawer. It stuck and had to be pulled out again. Looking for the obstruction, she found another note-the last one-which she had mourned as lost. Now she remembered that she had put it away, after reading it hastly, for there were people waiting below. It announced that he was coming to see her that afternoon and requested that she would not fail to be in. Just above the signature was a sentence in Latin, rapidly and illegibly written-his handwriting at its best was difficult to decipher. She started as she remembered that in the hurry of that long ago afternoon she had put off translating Latin. He knew that she had studied the language, for he had once asked her, seemingly apropos of

she had forgotten nearly all of it since leaving school. She rushed for the dictionary and read understandingly for the first time the neglected message, the gist, as it proved, of the whole:

"O love of mine; my bleeding heart Hea at thy feet; deign to accept the of fering of thy slave."

She had not been mistaken; he had loved her, after all, but why did hehow could be-trust a living story to a dead tongue? And why had she, however hurried, left a word of that letter unread?

The letter was clutched convulsively the lexicon dropped to the floor, and her head went down on her arm in a passion of futile tears.-Philadelphia

M. GALLIFET AND HIS FISH.

He Caught It in the Presence of Napo leon III, and It Made Trouble.

In the etats de service of Gen. Gallifet, the present War Minister of France, there is a curious note which should endear him to the hearts of all fishermen. After paying a just tribute to his abilities, the note reads:

"But, unfortunately, he selects extraordinary companions." Thereby hangs a fish story. Long ago, in the days of the second empire, Gallifet was the aid-de-camp of Napoleon III. At St. Cloud his quarters were just over the Imperial bedroom. Everything around him was very grand and very gloomy. The window of his room looked upon the pond that washed the walls of the chateau. The water was clear, and the surrounding scenery was beautiful; but the young lieutenant felt like a prisoner. Early one morning while seated at his window trying to drive away the blues with a cigar be espled below in the crystal water an enormous carp. The instincts of the angler, strong in Gallifet, made the young man's eyes snap and set his heart a-throbbing.

The big fish was the private property of the Emperor. Consequently, for Gaillfet it was forbidden fish. But it was such a fine fellow! The resistance of the soldler's conscience was useless. It surrendered unconditionally. The remaining part of the campaign against the carp was simple enough. Callifet went to his trunk, brought out his trusty line, to which Le fastened a hook and an artificial balt. With his accustomed skill he cast the line. The carp was booked and hauled in through the window.

Here the lieutenant's run ended and his trouble began. The fish landed upon a table, overturned a large globe filled with water, and caromed from that to a magnificent vase, which it also upset and smashed to pieces upon the floor. Then it began to execute a genuine pas de carpe among the smithereens.

The Emperor, hearing the strange racket overhead and seeing the water trickling through the celling, was astonished. He rushed upstairs to find out what was the matter. Gallifet heard him coming and endeavored to grab the carp and throw it out of the window, and thus destroy the evidence of his peaching in the imperial pend. But the slippery thing was hard to hold; so he tossed it into the bed and covered it up with the bed clothes. When the Emperor entered the room he noticed immediately the quivering bed clothes. He pulled them down and uncovered the floundering fish. His majesty's face assumed an almost jim-jamic expression, which gradually faded into a faint smile. He took in the entire situation, saluted, and left the future War Minister to meditate upon the mysteries of a fisherman's luck.

Shaved Without Arms.

American men think it a very merita rious and remarkable accomplishment to be able to shave themselves. Yet Charles Francis Feln, the armless Belgian artist, who has just died in his seventieth year, performed this arduous office every morning for himself. and dld not consider that he was doing anything unusual.

When a baby Felu related how he used to sit in the garden with his mother during the long summer days while she taught him to pluck with his little toes the bright colored flowers with which their garden abounded. Fortifled by this practice his baby feet became daily more flexible and useful to their little master, and when he had reached the age of 6 he could do almost as much with them as his little companions and playmates could do with their hands.

In later years, when he commenced the study and pursuit of his favorite art, painting, it was a wonderfully interesting sight to watch the gifted boy

He always held his palette with the great toe of his left foot and manipulated the different brushes, crayons and pencils with the toes of his right foot. Always when at table he skillfully managed his knife and fork.

Held Reformer to His Word. When a beggar asked a Philadelphia stationer the other day for help the latter offered him two lead pencils, saying: "With half the effort required in begging you can easily sell these for 5 cents apiece." The beggar gazed at the pencils scornfully. "Who'd give me 5 cents for them?" he demanded. "Why, anybody," said the stationer. about ten years old and especially 'Go out and try it." "Would you?" asked the beggar. "Why, certainly," was the reply. A smile of triumph of circumstances. She declared that sprend over the grimy features of the while lying in her bed at home more mendicant. "Here you are, then," he sald. "Gimme the 10 cents. You can't had seen the unfortunate woman come go back on your own word." It took out of the house, climb over the fence the stationer several minutes to re- and make her way stealthily to the cover his breath, but he finally entered adopt other tactics.-Hartford Times.

It's unwise to judge a man by the MYSTERY CLEARED UP BY A TEN. YEAR-OLD GIRL.

She Locates a Dead Body in the Bottom of the Illinois River-Claims that, in a Vision, She Saw the Woman Drown.

When the sullen waters of the Illinois River gave up their dead in the person of Mrs. Lucy Sommers some time ago there was not only cleared up one of the deepest mysteries that has ever occurred in Peoria, but at the same time there was evidence established corroboratory of a most extraordinary case of second sight.

One night early in January Mrs. Lucy Sommers, who was visiting her sister. Mrs. R. B. Craig at 822 Fayette street in Peorla, suddenly disappeared. She had been ill and suffering at times from slight attacks of dementia, though it was not supposed that they were of a serious nature. But on the night mentioned she arose from her bed, and announcing to her mother, who was watching with her, that she was going to get a drink she left the room and was never after seen alive. When she dld not return her mother gave the alarm and the inmates of the house turned out to hunt for her, supposing. of course, that in a fit of temporary aberration she had wandered to the most diligent inquiry failed to reveal nothing, but she had not told him that HER "SECOND SIGHT." coming downstairs in the morning, and that this was long before she could tion proved to be entirely correct.

GRACE HOLMES.

> down, down, until finally she disap Europe, will be of no little interest. peared altogether. The next night she slowly down the stream, sometimes floating and sometimes rolling along the river bed. Once, according to her story, it stood erect in the water, but did not rise to the surface.

The multitude broke up and a dragpassed, the afternoon and the day, but but it did not assure us of the age of the dragging process was not carried on according to her directions. She now declares that the net never toucher the body reposing on the bottom of ging had been unproductive those who had based their faith on the child's julgment began to waver and she was denounced as a fraud of the most pronounced type. Then a severe cold ice and the matter began to fade from It was useless to tell her that she must be mistaken.

She declared that the body was still Now Pere Schell has made the disin the water, that she could see it and covery. To be sure the record on the persisted in going to the river at in- tablet does not amount to much. It is tervals. During these visits she made the acquaintance of Captain Hefele, of the steamer Gazelle. She went to house of one of the neighbors. But the the captain and solemnly asserted that the body was fast to a snag in the bother whereabouts and then the family tom of the river. The captain paid no became genuinely alarmed. A search- attention to the child, regarding the possibly have had an opportunity of learning the facts in the case from any source whatsoever, The child was questioned closely, but she stuck to her story with a persistence that began to disarm suspicion. She described the garments worn by Mrs. Sommers at the time of her departure, and to the surprise of her listeners her descrip-

At length in response to her earnest solicitations she was allowed to go out and point out the resting place of the woman she insisted was in the river. She started from the house ac-

At her request she was then taken to there."

When it was known that the drag-

SHOWING WHERE THE BODY WOULD BE FOUND.

ing party was organized and they set whole thing as one of her hallucingout to find her. The ground was not frozen and they soon came upon foot- him, begging him to go and release the prints in the mud and going from the house.

These were followed as far as they could be in the darkness, when the party returned home to await the coming of day before renewing the search. When the morning broke, kowever, the earth was frozen hard and the trail abandoned the night before was hard to follow. New parties were added, and a reward offered for the discovery of the woman dead or alive. The country was scoured for miles in either direction, but always without result.

Sometimes they fancied they had discovered the broken trail, but these fragmentary discoveries led to nothing tangible. At last, in despair, the relatives invoked the aid of bloodhounds. The trail they followed was a devious and winding one, running from the Craig home, on Fayette street, north by northeast to Glen Oak Park, thence in a westerly direction to Bradley Park, outside the city's limits and on its western border. Here the trail grew faint and it was only with difficulty that it was continued to the Easton farm, where it was lost, and the dogs stopped and never after did they get any further.

At this juncture little Grace Holmes appeared on the scene. She is a child bright for her age. Her parents are uneducated people and not in the best than a mile from the Craig house she river, where she had plunged into an into the deal, and hereafter he will opening left by the icemen the day before.

This statement was borne out by the umbrella he carries until you find out | parents, who asserted that she had told umbrella he carries until you find out | the story identically as repeated on tions. Again and again she went to body. Nothing would put her off. She declared that she could see the body and would not rest until it was released

At length there came a day when the waters of the staid Illinois were far above their banks. The wind was blowing a hurricane and when the occupants of a cabin boat on the Tazewell side of the stream looked out of fragment, which shows that we have the window they saw what looked like a bag of some kind floating in the water among the willows in which their boat was fastened. A hasty examination convinced them that it was a human body, and upon rowing to its side it proved to be the body of the long-lost Mrs. Sommers. When the body was taken from the water the condition of the dress garments confirmed even to the smallest detail the statements of the child,

His Baby's Future Quite Apparent. "Augh waugh!"

It was the baby. He had repeated this remark sixty times in the last hour.

Mr. Newleigh's hair, such as it was, stood on end. "Gwow ahmb wowbdgow alwaugh!" added the baby, while people across the street got up and closed their windows. Mr. Newleigh ground his teeth. "To think," he grouned, burying his face in his pillow, "that I should grow up to become the father of a railway porter!" -London Tit-Bits. There are some women who begin dressing for an evening party at 2 in the afternoon, and who do not look particularly well, either, Every young man overestimates his popularity in the community in which he lives.

STORY OF THE FLOOD.

COMPLETE CONFIRMATION OF THE MOSAIC ACCOUNT.

Fragment Discovered by Pere Scheil Is a Babylonian Version of the Beluge, Which Antedates Moses by Fully Seven Hundred Years.

The announcement of Pere Scheil, the French Assyriologist, who has given so much time to study of the collections in the museum at Constantinople, that he and followed the streets she claimed to had discovered a Babylonian account have seen Mrs. Sommers follow until of the deluge much older than Moses, she came to the foot of Spring street, was so interesting to the biblical stu-From there she pointed out the ex- dent that we asked the discoverer for act spot at which Mrs. Sommers had an account of it. He kindly consented, gone down. She said that she walked and his account, the first thus far pubcalmly into the water and went down, lished in America, and, we think, in Every biblical scholar knows that the saw the body again. It rose slowly Hebrow account of the deluge, found from the bottom of the river, being in Genesis, has been paralleled by two caught in an eddy, and after whirling Babylonian accounts, one that of Beroaround several times moved away sus, a Babylonian historian, whose narrative has been handed down to us by early Greek Christian writers, and the other that found on Assyrian tablets by George Smith. Both resemble, and yet both differ, from the Genesis story. Riblical critics have differed as to the By this time the news of the child's age of the biblical story, the more conattempt had became noised abroad and servative holding that being written by the river bank was lined with thou Moses, it is older than his time, and sands of spectators eager and anxious was incorporated by him into the Book to see what the outcoms would be of Genesis, while the newer school of After sitting quietly in her place for a critica was, until the discovery of the few moments she rose quickly and with Tel el-America tablets, inclined to bea hurried gesture pointed to a spot a lieve that the story was burrowed from few hundred feet from the shore, ex- Nineveh or Babylon at the time of the claiming as she did so: "She lies captivity, or not long before it, at which time the Book of Genesis was written.

The discovery by George Smith of a ging party was at once put to work full poetical account of the deluge, on searching the hidden depths to wrest tablets in King Assurbanipal's library from them their secret. The hour at Nineven, was of immense interest, nothing was brought from the lake. the deluge story among the inhabitants In strict justice it must be said that of the Euphrates Vailey, for it was on tablets written in Assurbanipal's reign, that is scarce 600 years before Christ. To be sure, these were said to be copied from tablets in Babylonian libraries, but we did not know how old these original lablets were. Besides, the deluge story was on the eleventh tablet in a long poem, compiled in twelvebooks, one for each month, in a quite artificial way, and might belong to a spell set in and the lake was locked in comparatively late period of religious and literary syncretism. The original the public mind. Not so the little girl. Babylonian tablets, from which the As syrian copies were made, were much desired.

> such a fragmentary bit, but it is large enough to make it sure that the tablet contained the story of the deluge, and, most fortunately, the most important part of all is preserved, the colophon, with the date. It is dated in the reign of Ammi-gaduga, King of Babylon, and we know that he reigned about 2140 B. C. That is, we have here a precious bit of clay on which was written a poetical story of the deluge, seven centuries before Moses and about the time of Isaac or Jacob. That is enough to make the discovery memorable. We learn posttively that the story of the deluge was familiar to the common people of Babylonia, and therefore of all the east from Syria to Persia.

Prof. Sayce has lately stated, misnp prehending Pere Schell's oral announcement, that the new text verbally agrees with that discovered by George Smith, showing the care and accuracy with which the document was preserved from generation to generation, with "no change even in the form, of a single word." This is not the fact. Pere Schell suggests that different cities would have their different poetical editions of the story. This fragment belongs to the story current at Sippara, where the fragment was found; and we may suppose that the account given by Berosus was also from the Sippara edition, for Berosus tells us that Xisuthrus (Nonh), before the flood, buried in Sippara the records of the world's antediluvian history. The cunelform account discovered by George Smith seems to have originated in the city of Sprippak; at any rate, the Noah of that story came from the Surippak. There are in that account no such passages as we have in this new to do with another version, we do not know how old, for it is itself a copy from a parily effaced original.

This text is in poetry. It proves that he poetic construction was fixed more than two thousand years before Christ, Each line is divided into two hemistichs, as in Hebrew poetry. Literary form was no unfamiliar thing in the time of Abraham.

We learn nothing more from this fragment than we knew before as to the origin of the deluge story. The history neither of Egypt nor of Babylon finds any place for an historical deluge, The fragment is large enough to show that it is a poem full of polythelstic and mythical details, of which the Genesis version has been thoroughly purged, giving us a tale purely monotheistic, absolutely ethical and fit to give religious instruction to an unscientific people in the infancy of civilization.-New York Independent.

RICH YIELD OF THE PACIFIC.

Everything, from Wheat to Pepper, Found in the Orient Islands. Considered from the point of view of what grows in them-which is, after all, the point of view of most people of to-day-says a writer in Ainslee's Magazine, the islands of the Pacific present everything from the wheat of Argentina to the pepper of Guiana, and wrapped up and laid on a a host of things found neither in the tropics of South America, nor in the Philadelphia Record-hot heart of Africa, nor char within their own about Beginning with the way stock and the ordinary a utilities grown to Australia and New Zealand, thereby tiplication of strange w products as the zone of or north and west. The but dies are like the borths South America, putting to coffees from Java that the affords, the notines si men's falls punches as baked apples, the cample wives' headaches, the paper ger that brings tears to be small boy and baim to b midriff. From the same a niso the valuable teak he sites upon which much of merchant marine of the s is likely to depend. From Sumatra, up to the Philippi mosa, is the chief source at supply of atraw for his wherewith criminals as i salls set, of mattings for to of carpen. Eastward from the coars of the coconnut and plans bread fruit, which does not porting, to say nothing of the banana. Along the shores ther islands the native ag nese, who from time imp been invaders, gather party the long, slimy snalls, use mer, one of the most poor on the tables of the well to In choice spots among all 5 spots becoming constantly is erable, the Ciriental fooding the delicate birds' nest form darins and financial poter Mongolian kingdom pay Ek that their cooks may makes from it. There are mineral timber resources as jet lin ploited than those in the h There are possibilities of a cultivation, which have not se ed save in the southerning John Bull has put the aberga his solid foot and ventual form the semi tropic region likeness of his home come is growing richly in monthly islands, and cotton has lead such success that the Soma product is a considerable a cotton markel price lim ; guine prophets look to a their cotton crop of the Pacific vil ous competitor with the

A Wanderful Inc. John Curzon, a Polish ner was presented with a pills als inventions, performed and ordinary thing when he or ordinary thing when be us manufacturing a completent space of eight hours, and hard ials on which mother u would have looked with one

It appears that the Card hearing or the marrelm 22 gentus of Curron, determine him to the test, and forward box containing a few copper wood chippings, a piece of in an old crucked china cup a and a few cribbage board pe request that he should train into a timepiece. Nothing dannied, and penns golden opportunity of while the court, Curzon set also with enthusiasm, and is till credibly short space of eighting desputched a wonderfully sour watch to the Czar, who sa prised and delighted at the age he sent for the maker cale to him several distinctions, and him a pension. The case of the watch watch china, while the works we to composed of the odds and mig panying the old cup. Not and keep good time, out only recording ing once every three or for the remarkable watch is believed in the possession of the Russ

Work Only When The I

Observers of ladestrial of Mexico assert that, as farm noted, there is no more h person in the world than the laborer. Especially is this? peon of the tropics. It week peon of the tropics. It were he works for Americans shall plantations to develop man-ter of accommodation that sity. He demands a sour vance, too, on which to law time at the flestas befor down to several months of No native Indian has to will men in the tropics in order livelihood. His wants are bet bition is limited to a desire! to eat, a thatched but and a !! cloth. The hut he can make self. There are fish in the game in the forest. There's unoccupied land upon while raise a few cerenis to trade tnings he cannot product There is no winter to provide

Strictly Professions A characteristic story is p rounds at the expense of our delphia's most prosperous P ers. In common with a great his fellow townsmen he last fering from the grip, and last felt very badly indeed. Heas place of business one more plaining that every bone is ached, and despondent in april afraid it's all up with me," le to his assistant. "Nonses sured that young man; "you" many years yet." "I'm not " that," said the pawnbroket that I'm afraid to die, but the being put in a hole in the gro horror for me. Now, if I tag on me it wouldn't be si and, though the rainy days of

In summer, they only mean