MILLIONS FOR LEVEES.

for Reservoirs?

The history of leves construction on guns, was sent Monday in pursuit of the Mississippi river has been a long one. The first levee was begun in 1717, which was, when completed, one mile long, erected to protect New Orleans, then a mere village. This levee was four feet high and 18 feet across at the top. It was not, however, until after Louisiana had been ceded to the United States that levee construction was begun on a large scale. As the work progressed up the river and additional basins and bottoms were enclosed, the levees necessarily increased in height. The average height of the levees in Louisiana above New Orleans, is now between 12 and 18 feet, and this heigh* proved insufficient in the great flood of 1897. This flood indicates to the official engineers that three or four teet additional will be required.

Fortunes Appropriated.

Millions and millions of dollars have been appropriated by the federal government for the building of these levees and other constructions intended to protect the surrounding country from floods, and millions more must be appropriated by every congress to come unless other steps are taken to prevent these floods. These measures of the government are merely palliative; they Storage Reservoirs.

He shows in his official report that by the building of a series of great storage reservoirs at the head waters of the Missouri, floods can be prevented through the diverting of the excess of waters into these artificial lakes. Surely this is something for congress to give its attention to. Here is a practical plan. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Congress will go ahead appropriating millions every session for flood prevention without a question, but it will not appropriate the same amount for a plan, which, according to the government's treaches after the second engagement. own engineers, promises far greater results. Of course, the storing of these reservoirs would mean the reclamation of large tracts of hand to irrigation; but this need not worry congress, even its Eastern members, for the Eastern merchants are already alive to the situation, and realize that the reclamation of the arid West would open to them the finest market in the world.
