Drain is a queer little city: No saloons, no police, and two of the best country hotels in the state.

There is one business avenue still open to Bryan which would no doubt be quite remunerative. He might go into the patent medicine business. It would give him almost as good an opportunity to use his automatic talking machine as campaign work.

A steel bridge across the Coast Fork at this place would be a stroke of good diplomacy on the part of the county court. The old bridge is well nigh worn out and some of these days it will drop into the stream. At the present time, it is unsafe to haul heavy engines over.

It would be a splendid idea to establish a curfew ordinance in Cottage Grove, without wishing to be hard or to reflect upon the rising generation, it becomes necessary to state that there is an element here that needs prompt attention along this line. At 8 o'clock each evening every boy and girl under 18 years, should be compelled to go home, in order that some of them may at least assume a virtue.

The time is now ripe when something should be done with the bridge which spans the river in the limits of Cottage Grove. For a number of years it has been considered dangerous, and a load of rock will cause it to shake as though it would go down. Again it is doubly dangerous. It is completely housed in, and should a team become frightened and run across the bridge whoever might be unfortunate enough to be in the bridge at the time would be sure to be frightfully injured if not killed outright. The bridge is an eye sore to the citizens of this place and it would be an admirable time just now for the county to build a good serviceable steel bridge.

A petition was circulated upon the streets of Cottage Grove this week praying Governor Geer to pardon Frank Patterson who was sentenced from Douglas county, convicted of the crime of assault and rape upon Winnie Thorn. The petition was quite liberally signed. This is as it should be and Governor Geer should pardon the youth, for the reason that his associate, and according to testimony, the guiltiest of the two, was let go scott free. Patterson is a young man, and while he was no doubt guilty of the charges, it cannot be successfully denied that Harvey was not equally as guilty, and on this ground his friends claim that he has suffered enough.

No one has ever been guilty of saying that the Oregonian has a Booth among its editorial writers, but it did publish last Sunday one of the most nonsensical criticisms of the great actor as has been written. The writer, if old enough to remember Booth, the greatest actor of his time, was evidently too cowardly to write adversely of him then, but waits until time drags the reading public away from the man and his great acts before he attempts to offer his pent-up criticism. On the other hand if he were too young to know Booth in his hey-day years, he proves himself a knave, in that he writes of something he knows not of. There is little difference between a coward and a knave anyway, and sometimes both terms are applicable.

To the boy or girl who brings us on January 1st 1901 the greatest number of our soap wrappers with our advertisement thereon will be given one of those "cow clocks" shown in our window.

CHANGE OF WORK.

Ed Hebard the well known and popular clerk of the general merchandise store of L. Lurch has decided to change his occupation for a time at least, therefore he has tendered his resignation to take effect Jan. 1, 1901. Mr. Hebard has established himself one of the most reliable and painstaking clerks in this city, and he carries away with him the best recommendation a man can have—the regret of his employer that he must give him up, say nothing of the many expressions of regret by his many friends. Mr. Hebard will be succeeded by O. O. McClellan of Eugene.

OLD CLOTHES CLUB.

About a dozen or fifteen of the boys about town have organized an Old Clothes Club, the compact of which sets forth that any member thereof who shall be guilty of wearing good clothes during the specified period of one week, shall be subject to a fine. Accordingly the boys have been bunched together dressed in garments that were calculated to make a genuine knight of the road turn green with envy. The other day they bunched up in front of a freight standing at the depot, and created no end of speculation in the minds of the "brakies" as to how they should handle the gang when they hit the beam as the train pulled out: but strange to say they all got left and the train crew were no doubt greatly relieved. Thursday night one of the Old Clothes gang fell from grace, not being able to resist the charms of one of Cottage Grove's fair damsels and "spruced up." The boys were soon aware of the fellow members action, and prepared to lay for him and deal out his punishment in large and irregular doses. But he was a clever fellow and was ready for the emergency. The boys laid for him in the bridge. The young man knowing the intentions of his brothers, donned a different hat, put on a pair of "specks," stuck a false moustache on his lip and slowly walked through the gang without detection. The Club is in secret convention determining the extent of punishment to be administered.
