FRIDAY, JANUARY 25, 1901.

This is the time of year when the mail carrier earns a little more than his money.

The Parliament of England has formally invested Edward Prince of Wales with the sovereignty. He takes the title of "Edward Seventh."

It has been a good many years since the people of this vicinity have seen such high water as that of last week. Some damage was done but not any more than should be expected at such times.

The recent high water has given evidence that a drainage system is highly essential in a town for the protection of property as good streets perhaps a little more so. In fact good streets cannot be made and maintained without good drainage.

The private citizen is not the only one who has suffered inconvenience and financial loss by the recent high water. The Southern Pacific Company have been heavy losers, occasioned by slides, washouts, etc., and the expense of repair will be enormous.

The Prince of Wales has surprised the world on more occasions than one, and now when he shall have seated his royal person upon the throne of proud old England he may launch another surprise—he may square himself and make a real good old fashioned English King.

John R. Campbell the affable editor of the Eugene Guard has gone on record in the columns of his paper that he does not carry a wire cutter about with him, but he avoids saying anything about cork screws and can openers. Come John, make a clean breast of it while you are at it.

A wonderful and eventful life—that of Queen Victoria. Of the proudest royal family of all Europe born in the nineteenth century—the greatest in the history of the world. A dictator and a witness of the greatest national and international questions recorded in history; an observer of the wonderful achievements in science and invention she passed through the sunshine and storm of the eventful period into the twentieth century, to die. A study of her official acts portrays the fact that she would have lived the life of a grand and noble woman whether queen or commoner. Death ends all but the record of cold facts, and while today a nation weeps, in the distance may be heard the joyous shout of "Long live the King." "So wags the world."

The valley seems to be afflicted with house breakers just now. Robberies have recently occurred at Junction, Irving and last week entered the residence of Hon. T. G. Hendricks at Eugene, left in charge of E. J. Bristow during the absence of the family. The burglar aroused Mr. Bristow from his slumbers, and at the point of the pistol told him to produce his vest and trousers. Mr. Bristow promptly complied and then, after warning the overseer not to leave the house until morning at the risk of being shot, stole into the gloom of night. The thief got $15 in money and a watch of about the same value. So far as known nothing else was taken. It is more than likely a gang of these free and easy people are taking in the valley towns and it seems they are working south. Probably Cottage Grove will be the next town honored. It would be gratifying if some worthy citizen would empty the contents of a double barrel shot gun in the bethindmost parts of the night prowlers when he makes his next visit.

STANDS CORRECTED.

The local man of the Nugget unjustly criticised the Cottage Grove correspondent to the Oregonian last week, in the matter of his report on the heavy storm which occasioned no small amount of damage here and elsewhere. The Nugget wishes to say that the criticism was entirely uncalled for, and that in the literal sense the Oregonian article was authentic, and the Nugget stands corrected.

The civilized world stands agape today at news of the atrocious mob violence exercised in the states of Colorado and Kansas, in the burning at the stake of the negro perpetrators of horrible crimes. The comment current is to the effect that the penalty dealt was too great.

It may be so, yet it must be remembered that the crimes committed were great—he greatest against man and God. Hence why should we contend that any punishment possible to administer to such monsters be too great or severe? Can anyone say that the citizens of either state in question are less civilized—less humane—less honorable in the ordinary walks of life than the citizens of another State?

No! Then why should these citizens take the law into their own hands and administer extreme penalty? Evidently there is some reason why the people mass by hundreds and give speedy death judgment, and execution. In Colorado and Kansas capital punishment has been obliterated and the greatest punishment is fine and life imprisonment. A man who is contemptible enough to commit such dastardly crimes as those which only recently shocked the ear of the public is too cowardly to commit such a crime knowing that death upon the gallows shall be the penalty prescribed. Again, such a man would not hesitate to commit the most heinous of crimes if the state he disgraces shall pledge that under no circumstances and for the committing of no crime in the criminal calendar shall be called upon to surrender up his life. When Colorado and Kansas shall again establish capital punishment and then see that those guilty of crimes upon which such penalty rests, shall be brought to speedy conviction and execution, the citizens will refrain from making examples of the reptiles too slimy with the blood of crime to be tolerated in a civilized country.

Hanging is too good and merciful to such creatures. But the people of this country are tolerant, and when they know that justice, even in so mild a form, will be done, they will await the coming of the hangman, and refrain from mob violence, but not till then.

Mrs. Beck says she is pleased with Cottage Grove especially its musical aspirations. These are manifested by the number of pupils studying music and also by the number of pianos in town.
