UPHOLD THE LAW.

Inmates of and those who are indirectly and directly connected with houses of prostitution know that they are engaged in a business contrary to the meaning of the common laws of state and municipality. However they manage to cover up their business by one make-shift and then another, continuing their unlawful trade and practice. As time wears on they become reckless, brazen and bold, and at times snap their teeth in defiance to the laws of the community in which they live. In a majority of cases this class of people are always allowed more liberties than should be conceded, not because the city authorities nor the officers uphold them, but rather to avoid a clash and the stirring up of shocking and repulsive episodes. Instead of profiting by the leniency of the authorities and showing an inclination to live at least as quiet a life as possible and follow the practices attendant upon their profession, they become more bold, making a play, oftentimes, along the line of braggadocios prattle and black mail, and at last insulting the feelings of those who do not uphold such things and committing misdemeanors which cannot be overlooked and which brings them and their following into blazon glare of the public.

Without criticism; without upholding or condemning, either the authorities or the participants for actions past; without referring to what should have been done on former occasions; without alluding to the old saw that "we knew the cow would eat the grindstone," it does become any newspaper to commend the city officers and court in its actions in the affair mentioned in another column.

There are few people, especially those who look upon the brighter side of life who uphold joints and bawdy houses. However they exist in most places and no successful method of abolishment has yet been carried into effect.

Taking it for granted that they are to exist, at least for a time, it follows that some restriction should be placed upon them, be effectually enforced, and that the proprietors of these places, should know and respect the law of the municipality and not attempt to run things their own way all the time. The municipality may not be able to abolish such things entirely, but it is able and should emphatically insist that the inmates of such places should confine their drunkenness and solicitations to their own "dens" and not frequent the streets, nor engage in street combats. If the city and its officers will see to this, exacting a severe fine or penalty for breach thereof, and if the principals on the other side will respect the wishes of the law and the rights of others, little trouble will exist; and while those who abhor and whose feelings are shocked by thought of the existence of such houses and people, they may at least derive some satisfaction in the knowledge that this iniquity is kept under closed doors and that the eye and the ear is not continually shocked at sight and sound of that which is base, degrading and abhorred.

LANE'S ABLE MEN.

Lane county is ably represented in the state legislature and particularly in the senate. Representative Harris is easily one of the best debaters in the house; his colleagues Representatives Hemenway and McQueen have been seriously handicapped in legislative work, by reason of sickness that has obliged their absence considerable of the time. In the senate there are not two other members who labor more faithfully in serving and promoting the best interests of their constituency. Senator Booth is not an orator, but for a plain business talk, embodying therein clear and convincing argument, he is not surpassed in the senate. Senator Kuykendall, while disclaiming all oratorical ability, is one of the most logical reasoners and forceful debaters in the senate. He does not talk to hear himself speak nor in any way does he play to the gallery. When he speaks on a pending measure his conclusions have an effect. These two gentlemen have been very successful in securing the enactment of desired legislation that materially effects the interests of Lane county. Notably may be mentioned the increased appropriation for the state university, in behalf of which both gentlemen made eloquent appeals the effect of which is best attested by the unanimous vote the measure received in the upper house; effecting a compromise in the matter of reannexing the Blue River mining section to Lane county; the defeat of Senator Smith's bill for licensing of stationary engineers, the senators from Lane leading the opposition; the passage of the orphans home bill in a modified form and other measures of minor importance. Sure with such a competent delegation the interests of Lane county have been safely intrusted. Both gentlemen are popular among their colleagues by whom they are held in high regard and whose unanimous support they receive in behalf of any meritorious measure they may desire to promote. For accomplishing expeditious enactment of desired legislation Senators Booth and Kuykendall are deserving of commendation.—Cor. Register.

Representative Montague is the author of a bill carrying an appropriation of $50,000 which is dear to the hearts of veterans of the early Indian wars in Oregon during the years 1855-56. The preamble accompanying the bill sets forth that these defenders of homes and fire-sides willingly offered their services in defense of the settlers then in Oregon, furnishing their own arms, ammunition and horses. Their services were given upon the solemn pledge of the then territory of Oregon passed by the legislature January 24, 1856, promising to pay these hardy volunteers $2 per day, with rations, and $2 per day for the use and risk of each horse provided by them, together with the appraised value of each horse killed in action or unavoidably lost. The veterans have waited long and patiently for this pledge to be kept. Nearly half a century has passed. Most of them have passed away, many dying and leaving no direct heirs; yet not one dollar of the money pledged to them has been forthcoming. In the hope of tardy justice being granted to those survivors of the Indian War of '55-'56 and to the immediate heirs of those who died still waiting to receive their due, the bill introduced by Mr. Montague has been presented. The bill was passed appropriating $30,000.

People express surprise that the senatorial contest drags on from the first to the last of the legislative session. No surprise should be occasioned. When a legislative body is allowed election privileges, it is their duty to elect if possible whether the election is consummated the first or last day provided by law. Men are but human. Neither can McBride, Corbett, Hermann or Mitchell, or any other man be expected to pull off his support as long as there is a chance for election. The proper way is for the people to commence in the primaries and go up, electing men to senate chamber and legislative hall who will support, uphold, vote and elect men to the United States senate who will look after the amendment of the constitution with regard to the election of our United States senators by direct vote of the people. It is a long road to be sure, but it is a sure one and if this scheme could be incorporated into the minds of the voters of each state in the Union regardless of politics and other issues, the time could be estimated when we might expect to elect our United States senators in the same manner as we now elect our congressmen. The political garden may have to be the scene of considerable weeding, but if will be the better for it.
