FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1901.

With each through train from the east comes men seeking information and purchasers of Oregon timber. Only within the last few years have eastern lumbermen, become fully acquainted with the enormous timber belts of Oregon, and already vast acreage has been purchased, with indications that in a few short years every available acre of timber land will be owned by these operators. The lumbering industry made Wisconsin, Michigan and Northern Minnesota the great states that they are, increasing their wealth millions of dollars; and today, the tide has turned toward Oregon, and already the great state feels satisfactory results from the concentration of the timber capital. But the tide has only now turned our way; the benefit is yet to come. Ten years ago many said it would be years before the gutting saw will commence the reduction of our mighty forests to lumber; which in time will be converted into money, circulating throughout the state; but this cry today is far-fetched and grows fainter as each year brings us nearer the realization of the wealth bound beneath the bark of Oregon's great fir trees. When men who have made a success in the timber business, who have lived to see the northern pineries stripped of every foot of timber through their own efforts, invest their money in Oregon timber land we have a right to believe in their judgment, and that they estimate the time near at hand when the slaughter of the great forests of the Pacific northwest will be a reality. From now on each year will see many hundred timbermen added to the many hundreds already at work in our forests. What does this mean? It means thousands of dollars put in general circulation. It means additional wealth—wealth to the day laborer—wealth to the merchantmen—wealth to the timberman—wealth—thousands upon thousands of dollars of it to every branch of trade. Oregon is blessed, and that blessing destined her to be one of the greatest and richest states on the American continent.

The creamery business in the Willamette valley is today assuming promising dimensions far in expectation of the most sanguine hopes of its enthusiastic supporters of a year ago. Today as you glide along over the Southern Pacific Co.'s road traversing the most beautiful valley on earth—the Willamette valley—at all the important points and many of the smaller ones you will see new creameries some small and others large but all of sufficient size to meet the present demands upon them. At every point you will see the express car door opened and cans containing the cream from certain stations the amount of which is not sufficient to justify the location of a creamery, taken on and emptied put off. The fact is the project which Mr. Markham of the Southern Pacific has been so instrumental in putting into a flourishing and successful condition in this state, is today a very important industry among the farmers and growing in popularity every day. Why? Because it is a sure money earner. It gives to every farmer who has energy to procure, keep and take care of from one to a dozen cows a monthly income, which is as certain as death and high taxes. Cottage Grove is just a little behind the times, but perhaps by the time the farmers in other sections of the state have placed their creamery business upon a sound basis and are making more clear money from it than the rest of their farm brings them, our people may be induced to go into it. There is no more favorable location in the state than here, and if the enterprise will pay in other sections it is bound to pay here. The Junction creamery alone paid to the farmers of that vicinity last month $1000. The good people of Junction do not claim that they have any advantage over Cottage Grove, but we must admit they have. Their advantage lies in their ability to see the true worth of a first class creamery, and each month, especially those months in the year when money is always a little hard to get, they find themselves already in a position to put $1,000 in circulation, which Cottage Grove, providing she starts now, must wait another year. How about it gentlemen? Can't we use another thousand dollars in our local circulation? Let's try it, and then, if we find we have too great a circulating medium we can condemn the creamery business, and cut off the revenue.
