NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

United States Land Office, Roseburg, Ore., July 6th, 1901.
Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1892, Nathaniel G. Pennet, of Kelso, county of Clatsop, State of Washington, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 1721, for the purchase of the 8 1/2 SW 1/4, NE 1/4 SW 1/4, SW 1/4 SW 1/4 of Section No. 14 in Township No. 20 South, Range No. 2 West, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office at Roseburg, Oregon on Monday the 16th day of September, 1901.
He names as witnesses:
W. S. Bales, J. B. Belos, of Cottage Grove, Ore., Frederick Bloomfield, of Eugene, Ore., H. L. Petmel, of Kelso, Wash.
Any and all persons claiming adversely the above-described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 16th day of Sept., 1901.

MINING IN A PROPER LIGHT.

An Eastern gentleman who was in Salt Lake last week seemed particularly interested in the mining going on in Utah. He asked many questions and took a deep interest in the accounts of individuals who had made fortunes in the business of mining. At last after a pause, he looked up and said; "It seems to me that mining is about the most legitimate of industries. In the east we raise grain and live stock and make wagons and are engaged in all manner of work, but the object, after all, is to get money for what we do or produce. Why is it not better to go for the money direct? Then there is another thing. We plant our wheat and worry all winter to know whether it will winter-kill or not. Then, if it escapes the spring frost and the insects and there is a promise of a great crop, we wonder if it will not be so heavy as to cut down the price. If a man gets money out of a mine he does not injure any of his neighbors."

The man had begun to see things from the right standpoint, comments the Salt Lake Tribune. Men are all struggling for money. No matter what may be the occupation, the object is at last to convert something into money. All the money that the world possesses has come from the mines. There is no way to produce it from any other source.

It may have been taken last year from the Klondike; it may have been dug by the Incas in Peru; it may have been taken by the Romans from their mines in Spain; but no matter, it is the same indestructible measure of value, and not more truly following an irresistible law do the tides ebb and flow, than does civilization advance and recede, according to the volume of a country's legitimate money. Hence no work is more honorable, none more legitimate. The dollar that the miner wrenches from the stubborn rock is a new creation. It was no other man's, it lessens the value of no property that any man possesses; it will command recognition everywhere, and barbarous as well as civilized man knows its value. It sleeps in its matrix in darkness and silence until some miner blasts down the doors that lead into its chamber, and when awakened it at once begins to take on its proportion of man's burden, and it carries it on forever.

Surely there is no higher employment than to study how it was originally concealed and to find and bring it out to the light. The men of the East point to their mighty works on sea and land with a just pride, but certain it is no men of like number have done so much to change the face of the world as have the men who since 1849 have been keeping in flow the stream of treasure that in that year was set in motion eastward from California, and which has been kept flowing on and on with increasing volume ever since. They really have changed the face of our republic, they have kept the arteries of business bounding with ever increasing vigor, and no work is quite so legitimate as mining.

It is estimated that there were about five hundred thousand fruit trees planted in Montana this season. This of itself would be no slouch of an orchard, but the state is estimated to have ten times that number of thrifty, healthy trees, one-fourth of which have come into bearing, and the crop will increase from year to year as the bearing trees become older and the younger trees come into bearing.—Rocky Mountain Husbandman.

SLIGHTLY EMBARRASSED.

The Coquille Bulletin last week said the father of a 17-year-old young lady, in that place, told the editor a funny story about a young man who stopped at his home one night lately. The young man called on his daughter to spend the evening, and when he got ready to leave he realized that a heavy rain was raging. He had no umbrella or rubber coat and when the girl's father asked him to remain at the house he readily consented. He is a very bashful young man, and next morning when he was invited to a seat at the table very reluctantly accepted. He was very nervous and agitated. He sat opposite a mirror and saw that he had forgotten to comb his hair; then he dropped his fork on the floor and as he stopped to pick it up he upset his coffee. Matters went from bad to worse until finally in despair the young man quit eating and put his hands under the table. The loose folds of the table cloth were lying in his lap, and when he touched it he turned pale. He thought it was his shirt and in his nervous excitement while dressing had forgotten to put the garment inside his trousers. That accounted for the smiles and embarrassment. There was no time to lose. He hurriedly stuffed the supposed shirt inside his trousers. Two minutes later when the family arose from the table there was a crash. The dishes lay in a broken mass on the floor; the young man pulled two feet of table cloth out of his trousers and fled through the door. He is yet in the backwoods of his home near here. The young lady be called on is open for engagement to a less nervous young man.

WEEKLY CROP BULLETIN.

The past week has been dry, except during Wednesday local showers occurred in the southern and eastern sections of the state. These rains were very beneficial to the ranges and to root crops, but they are not general enough to wholly relieve the droughty conditions prevailing in that section, and more rain is still needed in all parts of the state for late crops. The week, on the whole, was slightly cooler than the previous one, and generally favorable for the ripening of grain and fruit.

Thrashing is now in active progress in all parts of the state and the yields are generally turning out better than expected.

Hops are a little backward, but the crop promises to be an average one in quantity and above the average in quality. The lice are doing no damage and the only complaint made is that the soil is too dry for rapid growth. The potato crop is being shortened somewhat by drouth, but no injury has so far occurred through insect pests, and with good rains in the near future the potato crop will be nearly an average one. Corn shows slight improvement, but it is still backward. Range grass is getting poor and stock continues to lose in flesh.

Fruit of all kinds is making good advancement, except that in Marion and Benton counties the Italian prunes are reported to be dropping more than usual. Apples are doing nicely.
