NATIONAL DAY OF THANKS

President Roosevelt's proclamation to a united people setting forth the annual day of thanks is as follows:

The season is nigh when, according to the time-hallowed custom of our people, the president appoints a day as the especial occasion for praise and thanksgiving to God.

This Thanksgiving finds the people still bowed with sorrow for the death of a great and good president. We mourn for President McKinley because we loved and honored him, and the manner of his death should awaken in the breasts of our people a keen anxiety and a resolute purpose not to be driven by any calamity from the path of strong, orderly, popular liberty, which, as a nation, we have thus far safely trod.

Yet in spite of this great disaster, it is nevertheless true that no people on earth have such abundant cause for thanksgiving as we have. The past year in particular, has been one of peace and plenty. We have prospered in things material; and have been able to work for our own uplifting in things intellectual and spiritual. Let us remember that, as much has been given us much will be expected from us and that true homage comes from the heart as well as from the lips and shows itself in deeds. We can best prove our thankfulness to the Almighty by the way in which, on this earth, and at this time, each of us does his duty to his fellow-men.

Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States, do hereby designate as a day of general thanksgiving, Thursday, the 28th day of this present November, and do recommend that throughout the land the people cease from their wonted occupations and at their several homes and places of worship thank the giver of all good for the countless blessings of our national life.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this 2d day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and one, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-sixth.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
By the President,
JOHN HAY, Secretary of State.

McKINLEY'S CHARACTER.

A great life has gone out, struck by the hand of the assassin. The chief magistrate of a great nation, in the prime of a noble manhood, and in the act of a loving, pleasing service, meets death, and fame writes his name amongst her heroes and history with the martyrs. A tribute to such a life is one of unalloyed pleasure, but mingled with the task is the knowledge that whatever sentiments are awakened in the American people by their sorrow for the loss of such a man, the striking fact is apparent that up to the last moment Mr. McKinley was never thoroughly understood by the average citizen. The outburst of sorrow for his untimely fate has been spontaneous, yet it is more of a public regret for the act than sorrow for a personal loss. This must be attributed to the fact that although Mr. McKinley has been successful, he has never really been in popular touch with the people. True, his career as a politician, soldier, statesman and representative of the people has been in a large degree remarkably free from error; yet he has never been an ideal, and never has been great in the sense that Lincoln, Garfield or Washington were.

To the casual observer he has ever remained a reticent enigma, and his conservative and perhaps class tendencies have helped to mystify a trifle the average citizen.

This has helped to keep his true character hidden. For a man who has made the chief position in the Nation's gift his objective point, and who successfully reached it, it is perhaps strange to say that his personal character, his home traits and his love and devotion to his wife, were amongst his strongest characteristics, and were the chief facts that contributed to his popularity amongst his intimates. His last moments were those of sublime heroism. His utmost self-abnegation, the love of his wife that manifested itself, the sublime knowledge that he had done his duty faithfully and honorably, and the great resignation with which he quietly submitted to the inevitable and prepared to meet his Maker, have brought the American people to a realization of the great loss they have sustained.—B. KERR in The Pacific Monthly.

DIVIDE ITEMS.

Mr Jacob Geiwitz's son, Charles Geiwitz, and Mr. Jacobson, arrived last Saturday from Minnesota on a visit to Mr Geiwitz and family. They intend to stay here quite a while and look over the country.

George Meinzer of Cottage Grove was visiting Mr Jacob Geiwitz and family Sunday.

Preparations are being made to put out a large amount of piling this winter.

Four new houses together with additions and repairs to others this fall is an item worth mentioning.

Cold and frosty mornings are the rule here now.

A winter trip to Southern California and Arizona via the famous Shasta Route is one never to be forgotten. Renewed acquaintance with this section will ever develop fresh points of interest and added sources of enjoyment under its sunny skies, in the variety of interests and added industries, in its prolific vegetation and among its numberless resorts of mountain, shore, valley and plain. Two trains leave Portland daily, morning and evening for California. These trains are equipped with the most improved pattern of standard and tourist sleeping cars, and the low rates place the trip in reach of all.
