TONGUE ON IRRIGATION.

Congressman Tongue has been misrepresented by a number of western papers on his position with reference to national irrigation. It is true that the bill introduced for consideration of congress did not meet with his approval but that does not signify that he is an opponent of irrigation. Perhaps the best explanation of his position on the question is contained in the new irrigation measure he has drawn and which was introduced in the house recently. A careful reading of its provisions will convince the people that his head is level on this point.

His proposed new bill provides for the accumulation of a reclamation fund from sales of public lands. One half of this fund is to be at the disposal of the Secretary of the Interior for use in examinations and surveys to ascertain the extent to which arid lands may be reclaimed, location of reservoir sites, available amount of water and the gauge flow of rivers. The other half of the fund is to be placed at the disposal of the Secretary of Agriculture to conduct investigations of irrigation laws and investigate methods by which water may be conserved, distributed and used. The measure also contains a feature adapting it to the legislation which various states have enacted or may enact relative to the formation of irrigation districts. It provides that where such districts have been organized and bonds voted to provide funds for the purpose of constructing irrigation works, public lands in such district shall be subject to taxation on like terms as other lands in the irrigation district for the purpose of paying principal and interest on said bonds and maintenance and operative charges. Irrigation projects in such irrigation districts will be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and when pronounced practicable and constructed, public lands within such district shall be subject only to a homestead entry of not exceeding 80 acres, final proof to be conditional on entire reclamation in addition to the requirements of the present homestead act. The object of this measure is to extend practical national aid to actual irrigators, rather than the inauguration of a system of government control.—Eugene Register.

GOOD PROTECTION.

The following from the Telegram cites other protection for deer besides game wardens:

"Game Warden Quimby was notified last week that parties were running dogs and slaughtering deer near Gates, in Linn county.

A special deputy game warden started immediately for Gates, and upon arriving there learned that there were parties running dogs south of town across the Santiam river. The game warden soon located the hunters, and on arriving at the hunter's house found 11 green hides, but instead of being deer hides, they proved to be five large panther hides and six wildcat skins. The supposed deer slayer proved to be L. T. Henniss, a well-known and respected citizen.

Although it was reported that he had killed 60 deer this winter, Mr. Henniss is doing perhaps more to protect the deer than any other man in the state of Oregon outside of the game wardens, so far as heard from. It is estimated by the best authorities that each panther and wildcat will catch on an average of one deer a week. Mr. Henniss has killed 11 panthers and wildcats within the past month.

That means a saving of 572 deer the coming year.

Mr. Henniss found two panthers killing a large buck. He killed both panthers and saved the horns of the buck. Upon another occasion he found two panthers that had killed a deer and dragged it under a shelving rock. He bagged both of these animals also.

A party of timber cruisers reported to the deputy game warden the finding of the carcasses of five deer killed in one day by panthers and wildcats. The killing of panthers and wildcats, in the opinion of deer hunters should be encouraged by more liberal bounties."

County Clerk Lee has mailed notices to all judges and clerks of election informing them of their appointment by the county court. Each judge and clerk is required to notify the county clerk within two weeks from date of the letter of his acceptance, otherwise the court will appoint a new judge or clerk in his stead. Those who accept should not delay in so notifying the county clerk.—Eugene Register.

J. D. Fletcher returned from Rich Monday with his force of men, having been compelled to close down the mine on account of too much water coming in on them. He will resume operations as soon as they can secure the proper machinery.—Mining Journal.
