ANOTHER GRAND REPORT FROM HIS MAJESTY'S DOCKYARD, AT PORTSMOUTH, ENGLAND.

Where Upwards of 10,000 Men Are Constantly Employed.

Some time ago the Portsmouth Times and Naval Gazette published a most thrilling and remarkable experience of the wife of Mr. Frederick Payne, himself connected with the Portsmouth Dockyard for many years. The report produced a great sensation, not only in Portsmouth, but throughout the country, being considered of sufficient importance for reproduction and editorial comment by the leading metropolitan and Provincial Press of England, as showing the marvelous powers which St. Jacobs Oil possesses as a cure for Rheumatism, its application having effected a perfect cure in the case of Mrs. Payne, after having been a helpless cripple and given up by several physicians.

We have now further evidence of its intrinsic value as a Pain Conqueror. Our readers will do well to follow the intelligent and highly interesting details as given in Mrs. Rabbets' own words:

To the Proprietors St. Jacobs Oil:

Gentlemen—My husband, who is a shipwright in His Majesty's Dockyard, met with an accident to his ankle and leg, spraining both so badly that his leg turned black from his knee to his toes. The Dr. said it would be months before he could put his foot to the ground, and it was doubtful whether he would ever get proper use of his leg again.

A few days after the accident I had a book left at the door telling about St. Jacobs Oil, I procured a bottle from our chemist, Mr. Arthur Creswell, 379 Commercial Road. I began to use St. Jacobs Oil, and you may guess my surprise, when in about another week from that date, my husband could not only stand, but could even walk about, and in three weeks from the time I first used the Oil my husband was back at work, and everybody talking about his wonderful recovery. This is not all. Seeing what St. Jacobs Oil could do gave me faith in your Vogeler's Curative Compound, also favorably mentioned in the book left at my house. I determined to try the compound on my little girl, who was suffering from a dreadful skin disease, the treatment of which has cost me large sums of money in going from one doctor to another with her, all to no purpose.

She has taken two bottles of Vogeler's Curative Compound, and one would now hardly take her for the same child, her skin has got such a nice, healthy color after the sallow look she has always had.

I shall never cease to be thankful for the immense benefit we have derived from these two great remdies of yours. I think it a duty to recommend these medicines now I have proved their value.

MISSISSIPPI DRIFTWOOD.

A Boon to Many Poor People Who Live Along the Banks.

A slight rise in the Mississippi up in Kentucky, said an old river man, is a blessing to many of the poorer classes of this city. A three-inch rise up above brings down a vast quantity of driftwood, and at the floating docks of the ferry landings great rafts are formed. You can see the boys every evening armed with long poles, with a spike in one end and a coil of rope at the other end, spearing the good pieces of timber just as a whaler harpoons a whale. They grow particularly expert, and I noticed one boy a day or two ago who could hit a log in the center the first throw and bring it to bank. This meant a supply of fuel. Many of the parents of these little ones cannot buy the fuel necessary to keep them warm, and the river furnishes it sometimes and sometimes it does not.

Much of the timber has been freshly cut and left by the cutters over night, when the river comes along and lands it here. I saw two fine ash logs yesterday, enough to keep a family going for a week, and the water had scarcely soaked through the bark. Of planks there is a great plenty, and also some barrels and all kinds of things. The river is no respecter of timber or persons for that matter, and brings down the farmer's barrel half filled with pork just as readily as a water-logged and useless trunk of a cypress tree. It has often been a source of wonderment to me how many people do actually live from the products of the river. I have never seen the figures as to what proportion of the population of the valley subsist on fish and get their wood from the overflows. I have been from St. Paul to New Orleans several times, and at all of the river towns you will find the boys ready for the overflow season. This, however, applies more particularly to the section of the river below St. Louis. But all along there is the fishing industry, less of it here than elsewhere, because of the proximity of salt water, but above here it is a flourishing business.

Seeing the boys spearing logs reminds me of the case of a man who agreed to pay the negro 50 cents a day if he would collect driftwood for him. The negro worked faithfully, and the man was selling the timber at a big profit, of course. Finally, at the end of two years, after the white man had grown too proud and too well off to work, the negro found he had just the same right to the timber the white man had, and he was the maddest creature in the boundaries of the United States. He is not over it yet. In fact, he was so disgusted he will not catch wood even for himself.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

He Wanted to Go Back Home.

There is something fascinating about the Swede. His honor and candor cannot fail to appeal to those who study him and see in him a lineal descendant of Hengist and Horsa. The breezy breath of the brine clings to him. His generic name is Ole. One of these typical sons of the North came into New York harbor a few days ago on board a bark. As he passed Bedlow's Island he looked up at the statue of Liberty. A heavy fog hung over the harbor, and Ole looked around at the pall which hung over everything.

"Und dot is Liperty undlightening de world!"

He looked around dolefully. The fog was growing thicker and his mind seemed to revert to "The Land of the Midnight Sun." The bo'swain's whistle sounded, and Ole took his place on the bow, but those who were near enough to hear and comprehend his patois caught a stage whisper to this effect:

"Und dis is New York! Take me pack to the midnight sun."—New York Post.

A Word of Cheer.

"Does your husband never compliment you on your cooking?"

WOMAN'S GENTLE NATURE CALLS FOR GENTLE TREATMENT

Delicately formed and gently reared, women will find, in all the seasons of their lives, as maids or wives or mothers, that the one simple, wholesome remedy which acts gently and pleasantly and naturally, and which may be used with truly beneficial effects, under any conditions, when the system needs a laxative—is—Syrup of Figs. It is well known to be a simple combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants with pleasant, aromatic liquids, which are agreeable and refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system when its gentle cleansing is desired.

Many of the ills from which women suffer are of a transient nature and do not come from any organic trouble and it is pleasant to know that they yield so promptly to the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs, but when anything more than a laxative is needed it is best to consult the family physician and to avoid the old-time cathartics and loudly advertised nostrums of the present day. When one needs only to remove the strain, the torpor, the congestion, or similar ills, which attend upon a constipated condition of the system, use the true and gentle remedy—Syrup of Figs—and enjoy freedom from the depression, the aches and pains, colds and headaches, which are due to inactivity of the bowels.

Only those who buy the genuine Syrup of Figs can hope to get its beneficial effects and as a guarantee of the excellence of the remedy the full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package and without it any preparation offered as Syrup of Figs is fraudulent and should be declined. To those who know the quality of this excellent laxative, the offer of any substitute, when Syrup of Figs is called for, is always resented by a transfer of patronage to some first-class drug establishment, where they do not recommend, nor sell false brands, nor imitation remedies. The genuine article may be bought of all reliable druggists everywhere at 50 cents per bottle.
