FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1902.

The editorial force has this week been busy in the press room, where in addition to our regular run of job work, we have been making a run of twenty thousand impressions for the Judson Rock Mining Co., who are getting out a brand new, 8-page prospectus to assist them in the sale of stock for development of their property in the Bohemia Mining District.

There is more genuine push and enterprise among the prominent citizens of our little city than among those of any town of like size in Oregon, and when those of both sides of the river get their shoulders to the wheel and push together as they do of late they generally land their game in short order.

Late news dispatches give an account of the narrow escape from death of the president and party who were struck by a street car going at the rate of thirty miles an hour. Several of the party were quite seriously injured, but the president escaped with but a few slight injuries.

This week our old hand press is being knocked down and crated for shipment to Portland where the American Type Foundry's Co. will take care of it. Altho' it has been as faithful and reliable as the proverbial family horse, we will bid it adieu with no regrets.

Owing to a shortage of space and a rush of work in the composing and press rooms, during the past month or six weeks the Nugget's mining column has not been as up-to-date and complete as it will be a short time hence.

Several subscribers and patrons called this week and gave the new management a word of encouragement and a bit of news. Call on us often, when you have business and when you haven't.

It becomes more and more evident every day that a sewerage system is badly needed in our little city and it will be a matter of but a short time before it can be put off no longer.

The local laundry and the special license required by outsiders is the topic of conversation on our streets just now.

No new correspondents have sent in items from their localities this week.

"Patronize home industry" and "Stand up for Cottage Grove."
