FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1903.

Again the sewerage question is brought to mind. We, as an incorporated city, have dilly-dallied with this matter for years, and the matter of providing drainage for the town has been turned under year after year by the efforts of a certain class of people who have disapproved of sanitary improvements on the ground of "too much expense on the tax payers." What a lame excuse to be advanced by an enlightened people! We are to be congratulated that the city is now filling up with people who readily see the importance of taking up such matters. Now is a good time for those who have helped defer such provisions to get in and advocate the adoption of sanitary conditions. These same people, who have hoarded their dollars, and have been at times sarcastic and angry at the more progressive class, have gone on year after year paying doctor bills and medicine bills, and not infrequently funeral bills, in place of putting that percentage of their earnings and profit into channels that would not only improve their properties and make them much more desirable, but would have been the key to the solution of slight mortality in this city. We do not mean to say that this is an uncommonly sickly community. On the contrary it is comparatively free from contagious diseases; but as the population increases disease is more prevalent and danger lurks in the air. Let us wake up and as fast as possible place our city on a sanitary basis. This is no pipe dream. Every physician will substantiate what we say. There is danger in the air, and it is our duty to use every sanitary influence to check and control that danger. A greater crime cannot be committed than that of failure on the part of a municipality to provide, at the earliest opportunity, against deadly contagion.

The recent agitation over the Sunday closing proposition, has caused several worthy citizens to express their views regarding the matter in the columns of the Nugget through the medium of well written articles, pro and con. The columns of the Nugget are always open for the expression of public opinions upon any question that is of interest to the masses of the people, but in justice to the Nugget and to all concerned, a word, at this time, from the management of the paper may not come amiss. Writers, on any subject, should remember to accord to others the same rights and privileges that they themselves expect and demand. Therefore let it be understood, that while many are interested in the question at present under discussion, others are not interested to the extent that a large percent of the paper should be devoted to the issue. In consideration of the above it is incumbent upon the Nugget to restrict each writer to 1,000 words, and less would be appreciated. All communications of this nature should be in by Tuesday noon of each week. Again, let us bear in mind that the longer we discuss a subject, oftentimes the more complex and perplexing does the issue appear, and therefore, the more apt are we to stray from the direct pathway of substantial fact and argument, into the narrow trail of personalities. In this we admonish all to be most religiously careful. It has been said that wagers do not prove an assertion nor do they decide a question of large, nor small proportion. Personalities prove nothing—oftentimes detract from the true merits of the question at issue—and causes those who are of fair mind to become disgusted with the whole thing, besides getting the participants by the ears.

There is one serious drawback to the flouring mill enterprise in this section of the country. For a number of years the farmers have given very little attention to the raising of wheat, and in years gone by they have had good reasons for so doing. Owing to the low price of this cereal which dates back a number of years, the farmers of this section have found it more profitable to devote their attention to other products, and therefore a comparatively small amount of wheat has been raised as compared to the production in former years. The price at the present time appears to justify the attention of the sturdy farmer class. Several of the best farmers in this community seem to have realized this and this year the home product is increased to considerable extent, and it is estimated that quite a heavy acreage increase will be made this coming year. Ed Conner filed 2,000 bushel this season getting a fair average per acre, and 77 cents for his product. It is understood that he is well pleased with results attained and will probably increase his acreage next year. Others are now taking the matter up, and in a year or so will again be furnishing our local mill sufficient wheat to supply the demand.

FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Cottage Grove, Ore., Sept. 17th, 1903.

To Whom It May Concern—

Be it known that for years I found the greatest difficulty in trying to get on at school. Everything went wrong it seemed. I was backward and people thought I was a dull child. But I have found out the reason recently, and thinking there may be some other poor sufferer in the same fix, I give him this information gladly in the hopes that he may find, like I am doing, a happy relief from disappointment, and untold honors at the graduation day. The only thing I found to get me out of my trouble was to consult Messrs. Morgan & Brehaut, of the New Era Drug Store. Their tablets and school supplies do the work.

Yours
ROBERT SHERWOOD.
