

QUICKSILVER ON THE MARKET.

mountains and is exposed by its outcrop for a continuous distance of over 7,500 ft. The average strike is S 70 deg. E. and the average dip 57 deg. A remarkable outcrop of ore crowns the summit of the mountain, huge boulders, massive columns, and gigantic cliffs of cinnabar-bearing rock, furnishing an immense tonnage susceptible to open-cut quarrying.

In main geological features, general structure, occurrence of the ore in association with the volcanic phenomena, etc., the Blackbutte quicksilver deposits do not differ materially from the quicksilver deposits of California, except perhaps in the noticeable absence of the serpentine rocks with which a majority of the California deposits are more or less closely associated. In common with all other mercurial deposits of commercial value, the Blackbutte ores consist mainly of the red sulphide of mercury, known as cinnabar, although the black sulphide (meta-cinnabar) and a little native mercury have also been encountered.

The main fissure of Blackbutte mountain is 400 ft. wide. This entire width is cinnabar-bearing. The richest ores, however, occur along several partition walls within the mass of lode matter. While for the most part this partition forms the footwall of the ore, yet the occasional occurrence of the ore underneath it, and again on both sides, has necessitated frequent cross-cutting. The richer ores along this wall furnish stoping widths ranging from seven to twenty feet in addition to a very wide adjacent area of lower grade ore which will come in for treatment under the system of averaging a large tonnage.

Besides the main fissure three others of importance have been discovered on the property and opened up sufficiently to insure a large supply of ore. Two of these have a parallel strike of S 20 deg. E. but dip in opposite directions. Openings on these veins have been made at a depth of 1,300 and 1,600 ft. respectively, below the apex of the mountain. While these openings are, topographically speaking, near the present surface, geologically they must be regarded as affording evidence of the depth of the deposit since the present canons which have exposed these veins are unmistakably due to the direct process of erosion. The openings described may therefore be regarded, in mine practice, as deep levels upon the deposit, and the presence of cinnabar at these exposures must be regarded as indicating that the hydro-thermal solutions, from which the mercuric sulphides of this region were undoubtedly precipitated, began the process of deposition at a level below the present exposures. The frequent occurrence of exceedingly rich ores, assaying from 40 to 70 per cent mercury, led the early exploiters of the Blackbutte mine to expect the immediate discovery of great bonanzas such as were encountered some years ago at New Idria and New Almaden, but, while similar ore bodies may be found, none have been encountered as yet, and the present management has confined its attention to the development of the immense masses of average and low grade ores. In spite of the exceedingly rich ores which the Blackbutte mine produces, a conservative estimate of the district from a commercial standpoint, so far as present development shows, must deal with the question of handling large masses of ore of average low grade, calling for extensive reduction works, modern appliances, and general operations on a large scale, for which local conditions are peculiarly favorable.

FROM SOUTH AFRICA. New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "Ah a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a truly reliable for old and young. My son, aged 10, had a cough and a cold. I had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would give him Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy that the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by New Era Drug Store.

CURED CONSUMPTION. Mrs. B. W. Evans, Clearwater, Kan., writes: "My husband lay sick for three months. The doctors said that he had quick consumption. We procured a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, and it cured him. That was six years ago. Since then we have always kept a bottle in the house. We cannot do without it. For coughs and colds it has no equal." 25c, 50c, $1.00 at New Era Drug Store.

ATTEMPTED RAPE.

Little Ethel Bartels of This City the Victim—Tried and Found Guilty—Sentenced to the Pen.

Last Saturday a low-down devil known as Jim Bunn, who has a reputation of being a drunk and a little tough, persuaded Ethel, the little eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bartels, of this city, into the machine shed, belonging to Ben Larch, and attempted to commit the awful crime of rape.

The story goes that he first enticed Willie Bartels, the little brother of the girl, along with other little playmates, into the shed, and after giving the boys money to buy candy, finally persuaded Willie to go and get his little sister, who was at the time attending to a little baby on the street. The boy finally got his sister to come, and when she arrived at the shed, Bunn fired the boys out and attempted his base designs.

About this time, Wm. Bennett, one of Mr. Larch's clerks, came along, and, seeing the boys playing around the shed, fired them away. He looked into the shed and saw the little girl getting up, her garments badly disarranged, and also discovered Bunn, who immediately fired Bunn out and went on down town, thinking that Bunn was drunk and had crawled into the shed to sleep and had been disturbed by the children. Mrs. Fitcher, who lives in the machine shed, had been watching the proceedings, having seen the man entice the little girl into the shed. When he came out, he started toward the river down the street, by the Fitcher residence, holding Willie Bartels by the hand. The little girl, in the meantime, had taken charge of the little baby left in her care, and started down the street for home, when Will called her to come with them and the man would give her 50 cents. Ethel then went with them. As they neared the river, Mrs. Fitcher became suspicious and went over to Mrs. Oliver Vestich, and word was given to Fred Bartels at the meat market. As soon as possible, Fred was on the scene. At that time the man had reached the river and was threatening to throw the three children into the river if the little girl did not come down on the bank with him. Fred promptly stopped proceedings and took the man in charge, assisted by Constable Lawson, who arrived about that time.

The little girl was taken home and the man was given a temporary hearing and turned over to the Circuit Court.

CONVERTED.

The case came up in Circuit Court, then convened in Eugene, Tuesday morning, and the man was promptly convicted, and Wednesday morning he was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. Such criminals are not worth living, they are a menace to society, and the sooner they are incarcerated for life or hanged the better for the community and State.

QUESTION ANSWERED. Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and led with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. You can get this reliable remedy at Garman & Hemenway Co., Price 25c and 75c.
