"The baby weighs twelve pounds, does he?" said the proud young mother. "Are you sure the scales are correct?"
"Correct!" exclaimed the equally proud young father incautiously. "Of course they are. They're the scales I always use for weighing the fish I catch."—Chicago Tribune.

A ONE HORSE DRAG.

The Block, Leveler or Clod Crusher Valuable, but Little Used.
At this season of the year, when many farmers put in some time in repairing and overhauling farm machines and conveniences and in figuring out new ones, it will be worth while to consider the following from Orange Judd Farmer:
Of the many tools introduced for pulverizing the soil none is cheaper and less used than the drag. Some farmers term it "block," "leveler" or "clod masher." Its use can begin with a two or three horse size immediately after breaking, when it levels the land, so that a tooth or disk harrow can do most thorough work, and this same form does admirably preceding grain planting of all types. But it is the one horse style used immediately after the cultivator

HOMEMADE ONE HORSE DRAG.
In growing crops where the necessity of work proves it one of the most profitable tools.
In early cultivation it gently hills the plants, doing away with an enormous amount of hand hoe work, and leaves the surface in its natural level condition, insuring uniformity.

future cultivations. During dry periods it is invaluable. All other tools loosen the surface, while the block on previously well tined land packs and jars the earth to the depth cultivated, retarding evaporation without injurious root disruption. A one horse drag similar to that shown in the above cut can be made by any one at very small cost. It may be modified or improved to suit one's fancy.

Cabbage in Cold Frames.
Cabbage plants in frames should be freely aired whenever the temperature is above the freezing point, or as long as the soil of the bed is not frozen, and snow should be removed soon in that case. But if the soil is frozen snow can be left on for a few days.

News and Notes.
Stirling Castle and Best of All are recommended as good tomatoes for forcing.
According to the bureau of statistics, Hawaii now supplies about 15 per cent of the cane sugar imported into the United States, and the Hawaiian crop this year was $40,000,000 pounds for the present season, compared to 23,100,000 pounds one year ago.
Secretary Wilson's annual report credits the balance in our favor in foreign trade to the products of the farm.
The tea served at one of the society functions in Washington recently is said to have been the "loose green article," provided by the secretary of agriculture.
Citrus growing in Massachusetts is the latest agricultural sensation.
Students in the agricultural course at Cornell university have formed an "agricultural experimenters' league."
The government's preliminary estimate of the cotton crop is 0,962,000 bales of an average net weight of 49.5 pounds.

Professional.
"Are you blind by nature?" asked the charitably inclined citizen.
"No, sir," candidly replied the doctor. "I'm blind by profession."

THE WORD MELODRAMA.

It has drifted from its derivation and original significance.
Nowadays "melodrama" is in general use as denoting a purely sensational hero and villain among the characters represented. Formerly the word kept more closely in its significance to actual derivation. "Melodrama" is compounded of the Greek words melos, a song, and drama, an action, a play, and was applied to two sorts of performances when it first came into use.
It signified a play, generally of the romantic school, in which the dialogue was frequently relieved by music, sometimes of an incidental and sometimes of a purely dramatic character. On the strength of his "Tyrannion" J. Rousseau is credited with the invention of this style. Some of the so-called English operas of the older school, such as the once famous "Beggar's Opera" and the once popular "No Song, No Supper," are in reality true melo-dramas.
In the second place "melodrama" was applied to a peculiar kind of theatrical composition in which the actor recited his part in an ordinary speaking voice, while the orchestra played a more or less elaborate accompaniment appropriate to the situation and calculated to bring its salient features into the highest possible relief. The merit of the invention of this description of melodrama belongs to George Benda, who used it with striking effect in his "Ariadne auf Naxos," produced at Gotha in 1774.—London Globe.

The Ordeal of a Doctor.
It is often claimed by outsiders that having a profession distills a woman's sympathies, but I cannot believe that this is true in the practice of medicine, where one side of the work is so immeasurably and I have seen a baby that came after fifteen years of waiting and hoping and was rejoiced over daily and hourly for a wonderful year suddenly struck down and gasped its life out in a day with pneumonia. These are the times when it hurts to be a doctor, to find that all the knowledge that you possess, all the skill at your command, is as so much chaff before the wind. To have a woman being an object to which an human being can grow callous. You are upon you when with all your efforts you cannot save the little life. No years nor experience can lighten hours such as these.—Everybody's Magazine.

Storms of Old England.
In the year 1411 in London alone 1,500 houses were blown down; in October, 1691, a great number of churches and 500 houses were destroyed; in 1753 it thundered for fifteen days incessantly. The dreadful night during which Cromwell's spirit passed has furnished a theme for poet and painter. And the great storm that "over pale Britain's hills passed" in November, 1703, the most terrible in British annals, also has its enduring record in poetry. It did damage in London to the amount of £2,000,000; over 8,000 people were drowned in floods in various parts of the country; twelve men of war, with over 1,500 men on board, went down in sight of land; and the Edystone light house, along with Winstanley, its inventor, was swept away.

Blind Swimmer's Straight Steering.
It is a standing puzzle that all blind swimmers are able to hold an almost perfectly straight course for very considerable distances, though no more guidance is given to them than some species of call or whistle coming from the winning goal. A blind man in fact, desiring to go in a straight line, possesses the curious power of being able to do so almost exactly. A provincial mayor instituted a series of contests in an open lake between blind men and ordinary ones of about equal skill and strength, and the result was marvelous so far as the straight steering of the blind was concerned.—London Chronicle.

Moths and Butterflies.
Butterflies are active in the day and fold their wings together when they settle. Their antennae end in clubs. The fore and hind wings never touch together. The chrysalis is singular and not inclosed in a cocoon or silken case.
Moths, on the other hand, are usually active in the dusk or at night and do not fold their wings together on settling. The feelers are very various in shape, but rarely clubbed. The fore and hind wings are generally fastened together during flight by a "hook and eye" arrangement. The chrysalis is not angular and is inclosed in some sort of case or cocoon.

Jewels on an Idol.
The jewels of an Indian idol must be worth stealing if many of those remarkably hideous images possess such valuable head ornaments as are made for the idol Parthasathy, in the Triplicane temple at Madras. The ornament is worth some 50,000 rupees and is made of sovereign gold studded with diamonds, emeralds and rubies, the largest emerald being valued at 1,000 rupees and the biggest ruby and diamond at 800 rupees apiece.

Full.
The doctor was sanguine.
"We're going to pull you through!"
"By the leg?" querulously demanded the patient, a sordid man, whose soul, even in that extreme moment, brooded on the matter of expense.—Puck.
