When the Poor Ride in Conches.
In the east side tenement house region coaches are associated with only two things weldings and funerals.
The coach is an indispensable feature of the welding, and only the very poorest are buried without the attendance of a mourning coach.

The whole block knows when a wed ding is to take place, and everybody is on the watch when the coach and pair come dushing around the corner to receive the bride. The vehicle draws to before the narrow entrance to a tenement and presently is entered by the bride, half hidden in her white vell and all nedding with orange wreaths. while a gaping crowd tooks on. The horses are lashed, the coach turns an other corner, and in three minutes the bride is at the place of ceremony. The ceremony over, the coach this time swallows up both bride and luide groom. Everybody is charmed at the night. The gossips are busy for a day. -New York Press.

From the Chapin, S.C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoen and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for os, but his medicines iailed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoen Remedy on hami gave each of us a close and we at once left the effects I produced a bottle and before using the entire complements we were entirely cored. Odd Street Names. In Clerkenwell, England, there is a street called Pickled Egg walk. It takes its name from Pickled Egg tov ern, which formerly stood there and made a specialty of serving pickled eggs. An interesting London thoroughfare is Hanging Sword alley, which is mentioned in Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities." London has also Pickleherring street. In Leicester is a street called the Holy Bones and another called Gallows Tree Gate. Hull has a street with the extraordinary name. the Land of Green Ginger. Coryclen has a street named Pump Patt, and there some years ago lived Peter Portic, a dealer in furniture. The most during of farce writers might well have hest tated to invent a combination of name and address so improbable as that which really belonged to Peter Pottle
