First Trip in 59 Years.

H. C. Veatch a resident of Cottage Grove and a genuine old timer in Oregon, together with his son, Sam Veatch, who has been a conductor on the Southern Pacific for more than 20 years left Wednesday afternoon for an extended trip through California, Arizona, Mexico and other points.

Mr. Veatch also expects to see the St. Louis Exposition and to visit his old home at what is now Enfield Ill.

In the Spring of 1845 he came to Oregon and here he has ever since resided having never been out of the State but once, when he crossed the Columbia river and visited a short time in Washington.

He was out in the early Indian fight and devoted a considerable time in helping to subdue them. During the journey of Mr. Veatch and son, a great deal of advertising literature of the State of Oregon will be distributed.

Every one will join in the wish that Mr. Veatch will have an enjoyable journey and return home safe.

Killed Near Saginaw.

On Sunday morning about 6 o'clock, A. W. Pylatt, a young man, while asleep on the S. P. track a short distance this side of Saginaw, was struck by an engine and instantly killed. It is learned he had been in Cottage Grove for a day or so and had been about town all the previous night. He had evidently started to his home near Saginaw and becoming drowsy had laid down upon the track to sleep. As he was near a curve the engineer did not discover him until it was too late. The remains were brought to the city and buried on Monday from Martin and Law streets. His father states his son was born in Douglas County, Kansas in 1881, was 24 years of age, came to Douglas county, 14 miles east of Roseburg, last October. He was raised by a Christian father and was always considered a trust worthy boy while at home. He had been earning money to pay on a mortgage on the home place.

THE KOREAN COOLIE.

In speaking of the fortitude and unselfishness of the Korean coolie in an article in the June Pacific Monthly, Dr. Hunter Wells narrates the following little story out of his own experience:

One winter, near Christmas, a telegram summoned me into Northern Korea to see an American sick with smallpox. The distance was about 100 miles, and the road a mere path, covered with snow. A northwest blizzard and snowstorm was on when the message came, and the journey had to be made in a sedan chair. I sent for eight chair coolies, and shortly, through the driving wind and snow, the strapping fellows appeared. I told them the news, and asked them if they were ready to go—100 miles at 20 to 30 miles a day, and the thermometer below zero. Every man consented, and no extra pay was demanded, the agreement being the same as in summer, or about 12 cents each man for every three miles. The snow was so drifted that four men went ahead breaking the way, and the other four carrying my chair, followed in single file. We made but twelve miles the first day, as we did not get started until about noon. The blizzard stopped and colder weather came on. A bitter wind from the north beat in their faces, but the men trudged uncomplainingly on. I walked as much as possible. The next day was a reception of the first, and on the third we were still 20 miles from our destination. An urgent message reached us to hurry up. The men were about finished, but after a few hours sleep, they started again at 1 in the morning and brought me to the place at 8 o'clock. The thermometer showed 27 degrees below zero. All the men were completely exhausted. Two had frozen feet, and yet they stuck to their work, showing such fortitude as is expected only of Anglo-Saxons. No one can go through such an experience as that and not have profound admiration and respect for the Korean coolie.
