The matter Yes, of course—but they objected to was brought up in parliament, and the commons ordered a return to be made of the total value of the forged notes presented at the Bank of England for payment, and refused, from being forged, for the 11 years from the 1st of January, 1801, to the 31st of December, 1811. This return, which is before us, runs: "The nominal value of the forged notes presented for payment, and refused, within the above men-tioned period is £181,61 — H. Hase, chief cashler. N. B.—The above re-turn includes all forged notes supposed to have been fabricated on the continent and presented within this period."

Parliamentary inquiry had no effect in diminishing the crime, for the Bid well and Fauntleroy forgeries soon followed, and every fortnight in 1818-on an average—there was an execution in England for forgeries of bank notes. and in 1820 more than 100 forgers were convicted. But such crimes as those could hardly have created a greater scare in Threadneedle street, however than the announcement a few years age that somebody had succeeded in accomplishing a very simple scientific It became known that a bank note had been split in two and the authorities were against lest the world should be flooded with duplicate notes. The splitting of the note had undoubtedly been accomplished quite honestly and without evil lutent and the man split it was frank enough to let the bank know that he had done so. A long correspondence passed besecret and at last a test was decided upon, a Bank of England note being sent to the inventor for experimenting upon. The bank received it back in two pieces, the one a facaimile of the other! The authorities were puzzled and for a moment the scare seemed to have become more real. But only for a moment. Closer examination throught back confidence. The test had shown the possibility of splitting the note, but it proved, too, the impossi-bility of passing the second half, the printing on which was too faint to pass. It transpired that the method was to glue a piece of callco on each side of the note, leaving the ends the house evenings.

PET CROW MARKS THE TIME.

Mocks the Cuckoo as the Hours Are Passing Swiftly By.

George Wreake, of Sibley Township, near Le Seur, Minn., has a pet crow, Bob, which has been with him for four years, and which he claims is the owt intelligent and useful bird living. There is in the Wreske home an old seirloom, a beautiful cuckoo clock, brought from Switzerland to pionees days, one of the kind that have a litthe door at the top in front, out of which springs a little bird every sixty oliutes and calls the bours with a

'cuckoo" for each unit of the hour.
After the crow had been in the famly about two years he began to mock he clock cuckoo, and this finally grew to be a passion with him, so that he hardly ever failed to give a melodious 'caw" when the clock cuckoo was calling the hour. Some six months ago, by reason of an accident to the shelf n which it was standing, the clock fell and the striking, or cuckeo, part was completely broken, so the door never opens and the hird never comes This appeared to be a great puzrie to Hob, for he watched the clock for several days and seemed to be studying deeply. At inst, however, he came to a conclusion and greatly startled the family by taking up the duty the cuckoo had previously performed, and counting out the hours perfectly at the exact moment with a clear call of "caw" for each hour the clock ought to have struck, one for I o'clock, five for 5 o'clock, and so on around the circle. He has kept up his work to the present time and calls every hour when he can see the face of the clock, as regularly and perfectly as an ordiuary timeplece with its hammer and

If a lamp is set at pight where the ight falls on the face of the clock, the crow, though he will doze between times on his perch, will waken and call every bour all night long. More than this, if a lamp be kept lighted and a pin be thrust into the wooden face of the clock so that the minute hand will pass over it but the hour hand will catch on it and stop the clock at any hour of the morning, beween 4 and 7 o'clock, Bob will notice t as soon as the clock stops and raise shrill exwing that is as good as an alarm clock, and keep it up till some me gets up and comes and removes the pin.-Minneapolis Timea

Ever since the advent of bloycles and motor cars, both of which draw envily on the world's rubber supply. and ever since the hundred and one uses to which rubber is put in connec tion with electricity, the material has become more and more scarce and valinble, so that even the old rubber should the worn out rubber boot may hrow out their chests in pride at being worth really something. Nothing con-usining rubber is discarded nowadays. The old rubber cost over which the spring tires of a motor car may run on a country road to-day may some day find a nesting place in the soft tresses of a woman's hair, after having been transformed into a bandsome

Old rubber, however, can be used by itself without any addition of fresh gum, the process of treatment setng a simple one.
