A SPY'S CLOSE CALL.

Rescued From Impending Death by a Clever Newspaper Reporter. On the battlefield of Antietam, Mr. McQueen met General William J. Palmer, then a captain, and strongly urged him not to continue his movements as a spy after Lee had crossed into Virginia, but the gallant young soldier gave no promise as to what he would be likely to do, and the very first night after Lee crossed the Potomac he was again in Lee's camp and brought back important information to General Meade.

Again he returned and entered the Confederate lines, and when he did not report after a week it was assumed that he had been captured and would probably be executed as a spy. He had been captured, was tried and condemned as a spy and sentenced to be executed, but he was saved by a clever newspaper reporter who determined upon after a conference in Philadelphia between President J. Edgar Thomson of the Pennsylvania railroad, Colonel Scott and Mr. McQueen. Thomson took special interest in Palmer, as he had been his secretary, and was much attached to him.

It was decided that Washington dispatches should be prepared for all of the Philadelphia morning papers announcing the arrival at the capital of Captain William J. Palmer, stating in what particular lines of the enemy he had operated, and adding that he had brought such important information that could not be given to the public at that time. These dispatches appeared next morning in all the Philadelphia papers, prominently displayed, and of course reached the southern lines within forty-eight hours.

The result was that Captain Palmer's identity was never established in Richmond, and his execution was thus averted. In a little while, when some prisoners had been exchanged, there was a vacancy made in the list of the exchanged men by death. Palmer's friends had him take the place and name of the dead soldier, and he thus escaped and returned to the service.

In Buying Feed.

In buying feed, to supplement his horse grown supply the dairyman's aim should be to secure digestible and palatable protein on the most economical terms.

The quality of the manure made depends to a great extent on the kinds of feed used, and a judicious selection will result in a great improvement in this direction.

The cheapness of the buckwheat products for the purchaser of protein is pointed out by the New Jersey experiment station in a review of its examination of many concentrated feeding stuffs sold in the state. These feeds were also found to contain large quantities of carbohydrate and fat. Of the wheat products wheat feed was slightly the cheapest, and middlings were more expensive than bran. Out middlings were a little cheaper than wheat bran, while among the whole grain products, all of which were expensive sources of protein, ground oats were the cheapest and ground wheat the most expensive.

A New View of the Catalpa.

The booming of the catalpa has led a writer in Scientific American to figure out that corn is a much better paying crop than catalpa. He says: "About seventeen years ago an enterprising person planted twenty acres in catalpa trees in a most favorable location on the Mississippi river bottom lands, about twelve miles north of Hannibal, Mo., adjoining our railroad. I have ridden by this field frequently and watched this experiment with much interest. He has recently sold his trees for fence posts, the returns of which paid him a little more than his taxes. If he had planted in corn annually he could have made $2,000 net profit."

The Potato Crop.

In the northwest a good potato crop is promised, the favorable conditions noted from week to week being continued. In the heavy potato belt of Wisconsin general crop advance is noted. Prospects are favorable in Minnesota. Important potato sections of Colorado have had generous distribution of rainfall and sunshine, and the crop is highly promising.—Orange Judd Farmer.

FINE ATTRACTION.

High-Class Drama at Opera House Two Nights This Week.

Owing to rearrangement of dates, Cottage Grove will have the privilege of two performances by a high-class dramatic company this Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at the Opera House.

The Humphrey-Chapman Company had arranged to play at Roseburg, but the Opera House there having changed hands they found three nights at their disposal and concluded to give two performances in Cottage Grove. They go from Roseburg to Eugene for an engagement of three nights.

It is thus only by the misadventure, standing as it does that Cottage Grove has secured the opportunity. In this piece the plot centers around a young man named Walter Allen. He was an inventor and loved a young heroine, who reciprocated his affections, despite his being a pauper. Then comes the villainous cousin, who also loves the heroine.

To make things more interesting another cousin loves the young inventor. The two villainous cousins combine in their efforts to separate Allen and his wealthy sweetheart, and at one time nearly succeeded. But their scheme is frustrated by the disclosure of a girl who overheard a conversation and the lovers become married and escape in a steamer. The plotters are on deck, literally, again, however, and they dope Allen and throw him overboard, which gives title to the play. The water revives the hero, however, and instead of being eaten up by the fishes he bravely swims to a place of safety, where he crawls out to dry himself. The experience makes him mad and when in the last act the widow is married up the church steps at Trafalgar square to marry the villain, the stock shares Allen's ruin and he is once more sane. The villain and villainess are arrested and, of course, Allen and his wife live happily ever after.

Seats are on sale at New Era Drug Store, for the performances Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. "Noble's Tennessee" will be the bill Wednesday evening. Both are new, high-class plays. Twelve people are in the company.

The Horribly.

The horribly is the most cruel and bloodthirsty of the entire family. He is armed with a most formidable weapon, which consists of four horns, or sharp and strong that these will penetrate leather. He makes his appearance in June. The female is armed with six horns, with which she bites both cattle and horses and even human beings.—Columbian's Rural World.

CLIMATE'S CURE

The influence of climate conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overlooked. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food, regimen and a regular use of Climate's Cough Syrup. For explication in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, 25c a bottle and night's rest and the absence of that speaking cough and debilitating night sweats. Climate's Cough Syrup and the exhibition due to regulate the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking Climate's Cough Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer climate, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use Climate's Cough Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 50c. All druggists, German & Hemens.
