Peeding Before and After This Peried-Value of Hot Water.

Our cows are liberally fed at all times of the year. After they are dry all points in Oregon to as far south they are, of course, fed less. The grain as Ashland, for visitors from the feed at this time is usually mill feedbran and middlings or so called mixed position, to enable them to look feed-writes H. E. Cook in American over western Oregon, that they may Agriculturist. Oats are as good and at have an opportunity to locate or inan equal price would be preferable, vest, Hay and stlage make the coarse fedder ration. If they calve in summer time and there is a disposition to a caked or inflamed udder, we keep them in the barn for a time.

I am satisfied it is a bad practice to reduce the feed while dry to a point where the cow loses herve and muscular force. If the feed is properly balanced and the ash content of the ration is necessary, there will be no danger of kuflammation-in fact, I flud where the system is nourished and strong there is less danger of retention of the afterbirth and caked udders. The main feeding at this time feeds lacking in protein and ash, a practice sure to bring trouble.

I have known farmers to feed four am sure good will come from the practice. Cows fed in this way will pass through the ordeal easily.

I prefer to have them by themselves in box stalls, not in an adjoining room, but in the same stable where the temperature is the same and they feel quite at home. As soon as the calf is dropped I give the cow all the hot water she will drink. The animal is more or less feverish and needs water, but not cold or even cool water. I would prefer to give a small quantity of cold than none at all. But hot water-just

Whether the calf should stay with the mother is of less importance and may be a nonessential. It will largely depend upon the peculiarity of the mother. If she is inclined to hold up her milk when the calf is taken away I would not let it suck, but milk her and feed the calf. If the udder is caked and the cow is not irritated by the calf if will be a quick and easy way of reducing the udder to a normal condition. It is nature's method. I do not believe the mother and calf should be separated from sight at once after birth. It is not natural and creates an unrest, often damaging to the future of the cow. The individuality of the mother should be noted and catered to at this time rather than the arbitrary judgment of the owner.

Feeding the Dairy Cow.

A good cow is a milk making machine. Usually she will give milk in proportion to the feed given. If milk is the object it pays to feed the right kind of feed liberally. If milk is wanted only for family use it may be that she does not need to be fed to her full

Ailments and Cures

Ropy milk is almost invariably caused by drinking from stagnant water. It appears mostly in summer and fall months. The one way of preventing it is to keep the herd on good, clean ground and have the udders washed and wiped before milking.-Farm Jour-

Scours In Culves.

Allowing the calf to become very hungry and then allowing it to consume large quantities in a rapid manner is a very common cause of scours, denly that there is no time to hunt a writes E. M. Michener, V. M. D., in Farm Journal. The young calf should Mr. Barber says: "I have tried have its day's allowance given in not less than four separate feeds of equal Diarrhoea Remedy, which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. I keep quantity and at regular intervals of time. No sudden changes should be made in quality or quantity of food. Contributing causes of scours are spolled or tainted food, unclean drinking vessels, dark, damp, poorly ventilated and unclean stables.

In treatment of scours diminish the amount of food, give one dose of from one to three ounces of castor oll on an empty stomach. If the case is severe follow with this prescription: Take of salol one dram, soda bicarbonate four drams. Mix and divide into six powders. Give one powder every three to five hours, according to the age and strength of the animal.

Contagious Abortion. Cows that have aborted should be washed out with a 1 per cent solution of creolin or lysol, continuing this daily until all discharge has stopped. Pregnant cows should be given sodium byposulphite once daily in tablespoonful doses as a drench. When dows abort in pasture great care should be taken to burn the offspring on the spot where it dropped, and the immediate vicinity should be thoroughly limed.-Farm and Ranch.

Bloating Cows.

Regarding the treatment of cows suffering from bloat a correspondent of Rural New Yorker writes: We have a way that makes puncturing of the paunch "look like 30 cents," and as far as I ever have been able to find out it is not found in any text book. We have a piece of strong rubber steam pipe, three-quarter inch, as used in many creamerles. This is about eight feet long. We place a clevis in the cow's mouth and after oiling the tubing let down to the stomach. This lets the accumulated gas pass out in weather, is cured quickly by Ballard's a very short time. We then give a dose Snow Liniment. Oscar Oleson, Gibof salts or linseed oil, and that is all son City, Ill., writes, Feb. 16, 1902: "A and have never had any bad results.
