A Picnic Party.

In spite of a very wet evening on Friday, there was a jolly picnic in the Grove. It was held in doors, to be sure, at the Club rooms where the ladies came dressed in pretty summer costumes, with daintily trimmed hats to match. In order to muster a general interest the names of summer resorts and large cities were pinned on the backs of the guests, who then made such suggestions to each other as to enable each one to guess the place they were supposed to be visiting. This was followed by a flower hunt a number of flowers being represented by pictures and objects placed about the rooms. Prizes was awarded the best guessers, the ladies being a very pretty box of stationery and the gentlemen's a silk handkerchief. Mrs. Comer was the lucky lady and Mr. Hemenway the prize winner among the gentlemen. Each guest then received five beans for the name of each flower correctly guessed and these were bid in on a very jolly auction sale. The guests had been requested to bring some old discarded thing in a package and the peals of laughter as the packages were unwrapped gave evidence that much originality had been exercised in the selection of the articles. Mr. Welch made himself famous as an auctioneer.

A picnic lunch was then served. sandwiches and margarites were temptingly arranged in baskets and coffee was served in cups, unaccompanied by saucers and stirred with tea spoons.

The appearance of the ladies in picnic costumes was a joke on the entertaining committee who appeared themselves in rather sober gowns.
