BOHEMIA MINING NOTES

And General Mining News Gleaned from Exchanges.

W. H. Horse is taking a needed rest around town, but will soon return to his big job.

W. H. Horse is taking a needed rest around town, but will soon return to his big job.

Allentown phot is making a much appreciated visit to ropes and steam baling business affairs, before going back to the hills in a month or two.

J. A. Findlay went to Portland on Friday, but was not in the market and is still satisfied with the market of the past week. He noted:

"The market is about in line with the present market, but it seems that the central gold should not long down more than a few dollars. It looks as though a good deal of it is ready to be sold. However, the July market has base provided more for than the May, and as the market seems to be moving up, the January market may be strengthened for the season."

How the Wall Street Speculation is Draining

The markets of the New York and Philadelphia Stock exchanges are still in a most uncertain condition. The New York Stock exchange has declined from its high of $76.75 to $72.50, while the Philadelphia Stock exchange has declined from $61.50 to $57.50.

With the reports of the Wall Street speculation, the market has been moving down. The New York Stock exchange has declined from $76.75 to $72.50, while the Philadelphia Stock exchange has declined from $61.50 to $57.50.

The market is about in line with the present market, but it seems that the central gold should not long down more than a few dollars. It looks as though a good deal of it is ready to be sold. However, the July market has base provided more for than the May, and as the market seems to be moving up, the January market may be strengthened for the season."

The Wall Street speculation is draining the markets of the New York and Philadelphia Stock exchanges are still in a most uncertain condition. The New York Stock exchange has declined from its high of $76.75 to $72.50, while the Philadelphia Stock exchange has declined from $61.50 to $57.50.

With the reports of the Wall Street speculation, the market has been moving down. The New York Stock exchange has declined from $76.75 to $72.50, while the Philadelphia Stock exchange has declined from $61.50 to $57.50.

The market is about in line with the present market, but it seems that the central gold should not long down more than a few dollars. It looks as though a good deal of it is ready to be sold. However, the July market has base provided more for than the May, and as the market seems to be moving up, the January market may be strengthened for the season."

The Wall Street speculation is draining the markets of the New York and Philadelphia Stock exchanges are still in a most uncertain condition. The New York Stock exchange has declined from its high of $76.75 to $72.50, while the Philadelphia Stock exchange has declined from $61.50 to $57.50.

With the reports of the Wall Street speculation, the market has been moving down. The New York Stock exchange has declined from $76.75 to $72.50, while the Philadelphia Stock exchange has declined from $61.50 to $57.50.