IS THE MOON INHABITED. HUMAN BLOOD MARKS.
Science has proven that the moon has an atmosphere, which makes life in some form possible on that satellite but not for human beings, who have a hard enough time on this earth of ours; especially those who don't know that Electric Bitters cure headache, biliousness, malaria, chills and fever, jaundice, dyspepsia, dizziness, torpid liver, kidney complaints, general debility and female weaknesses. Unequaled as a general tonic and appetizer for weak persons and especially for the aged. It induces sound sleep. Fully guaranteed by Benson's Pharmacy. Price only 50c.

A tale of horror was told by marks of human blood in the home of J. W. Williams, a well known merchant of Bac, Ky. He writes: "Twenty years ago I had severe hemorrhages of the lungs, and was near death when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery. It completely cured me and I have remained well ever since." It cures hemorrhages, chronic coughs, rattled colds and bronchitis, and is the only known cure for weak lungs. Every bottle guaranteed by Benson's Pharmacy, 26 and 28, Trial bottle free.

To the teachers of America:
To evidence its appreciation of the National Educational Association's selection of the Pacific Coast as the scene of its next annual convention at San Francisco, California, July 9 to 13th inclusive and to encourage delegates to include Portland and Oregon in their itinerary, the Portland Commercial Club offers five thousand dollars in prizes for articles on Portland, Oregon and this section of the United States, as follows:

Grand total.....$5,000.00
In order to be eligible for competition these articles must appear in a regular edition of some newspaper or other publication printed outside of the states of Oregon and Washington, said publication incomplete to be in the hands of the judges not later than October 1, 1906. These articles must be sealed and addressed to Teachers' Contest, Care Portland Commercial Club, Portland, Oregon.

They will be opened by the Judges. Prizes will be awarded strictly on the merits of the articles. Contestants can treat any phase of the subject that appeals to them—Natural Resources, Scenery, Religion, Agriculture and Horticulture, History, Educational and Economic Advantages, Climate, or Social Conditions, etc.—or in a more comprehensive vein. The judges will be absolutely untrammeled in making their decisions.

This offer is made, not scornfully with a view of having the country "boomed" in the common acceptance of that term, as to have the teachers of the country become more familiar with this portion of the United States and give expression to their views in such articles as will be acceptable to papers throughout the entire Union.

The Man Had Nerve.
He was a New York promoter. Every dollar that he had in the world; every dollar that he could persuade his friends to invest; every dollar that his credit would stand he had invested in a great public amusement place. He had gone without an overcoat at last, so hard pressed had he been—in the final few dollars. At last every thing was ready for the opening; the advertising was done, and there was not a penny left in the treasury to make change at the gates. The moneyless promoter went to a bank and tried to borrow $200 in small change. "What have you got for security?" was the question. The man told of the brilliant palace of amusement he had built. The bankers laughed at him. He went to the gates and instructed the gatekeepers to let everybody in free who tendered money that could not be changed. That night Luna Park was opened, and the next day the penniless promoter commenced to deposit thousands of dollars in the bank—not the bank which had refused to loan him $200 in change. The man who conceived, planned and constructed Luna Park, the greatest, most dazzling and most successful of all the amusement places of New York, had nerve.

Nerve is that quality in a man which can go up against adversity, grip it with bull-dog determination, and hang on like grim death.

Nerve is what stands by a man when his friends leave him; when business is going to the bad in spite of him.
The other day a prominent young business man, closely identified with Kansas affairs, and possessed of a happy home, substantial backing and splendid prospects, was found dead in a hotel with a bullet hole through his head. Things had been going ill with him in some ways, and he had lost his nerve.
When you see a big factory or a big store, which has started with nothing and grown to maturity and power, you are very likely to conclude that the proprietor must have been a man of business ability. You can also safely get down this as a fact; the man had nerve. Nerve is one of the essentials of business success.—Merchant's Journal.
