Prisoners and Captives

By H. S. MERIDIAN

CHAPTER XIII.

Prisoners and Captives

The story of the man and woman who were captured by the enemy was one of the most exciting and thrilling of all the stories that came to their ears. The man and woman had been together for many years, and their love and friendship were strong and enduring. As they waited in the prison cell, they could hear the sounds of battle outside, and they knew that their lives were in danger.

Chapter XIV.

The man and woman were transferred to another prison, and there they were kept for several days. They were fed sparingly, and their conditions were poor. They were kept in a small cell and were not allowed to see each other. The man and woman knew that they were prisoners, and they felt that their lives were in danger. They were kept in the prison for several days, and they were never allowed to see each other.

Chapter XV.

The man and woman were transferred to another prison, and there they were kept for several days. They were fed sparingly, and their conditions were poor. They were kept in a small cell and were not allowed to see each other. The man and woman knew that they were prisoners, and they felt that their lives were in danger. They were kept in the prison for several days, and they were never allowed to see each other.