WASHINGTON, July 5—San Francisco and the rest of the Far West and the Pacific area today continued to receive news of the saner and more hopeful conditions which have been brought about by the end of the recent harvest season, which for the last five years has been a cause of much gloom and disappointment in certain Western markets.

The harvest season this year in California was much better than in previous years, and the crops are expected to bring a higher price than in any other year. This is due to the fact that the weather was favorable for growing crops, and the crops are expected to be larger and of better quality than in previous years.

The news from the West today has been received with much relief by the people of the Pacific area, and it is expected that the harvest season will bring about a much-needed improvement in the economic conditions of the region.

The news from the West today has been of particular interest to the farmers of the Pacific area, who have been much disturbed by the poor harvest season in recent years.
