Coercive power has been used against the town. A large number of votes have been cast in favor of the town's annexation by the city, and the town's leaders have been threatened with violence if they do not submit to the annexation. The town's residents are deeply concerned about the implications of this annexation, and they are urging their government to intervene to protect their interests.