Census Taking Under Difficulties. To take the census of the British empire is a matter of difficulty in certain districts. A native official was ordered to take a census of what was known to be a populous village in Uganda. He returned with the report that there was no population, the explanation being that the inhabitants had fled on hearing of his approach. More precise instructions were given to him and he paid another visit to the village. The result of his inquiry was given thus in the tabulated form: Number of huts, 257; inhabitants, men over 18 years of age, 0; women over 18 years of age, 0; children, 0; total, 0.

Not in His Line. A very pretty young woman slipped and fell on the stone steps in front of her father's house, spraining her knee. She disliked doctors, but the knee finally grew so bad that she was persuaded to call in medical advice. She wouldn't have this doctor or that one, but finally said she would consent to having called in a certain spruce-looking young man, carrying a homeopathic medicine case, who passed the house every day. The family kept a sharp lookout, and when he came along called him in. The young lady modestly raised her skirts and showed the disabled member. "The young man looked at it and said: 'That certainly is quite serious.'" "Well," said the young lady, "what shall I do?" "If I were you," he said, "I would send for a physician." "But can you not attend to it?" asked the girl. "Not very well," answered the young man, "I am not in my line."

No Chance. Stranger—If you think a curfew law would be a good thing for the town why don't you bring the matter up before the city fathers? Native—That's the trouble. We haven't any city fathers. Some of 'em are old bachelors, and the rest of 'em live in apartment houses.

Sure, yer honor, some people are very careful.—Punch.
The department store salesman had taken twenty-nine rolls of dress goods from the shelf and was a trifle impatient. "Madame," he said, politely, "isn't there anything here which suits you?" "No," replied the fair shopper, "I guess I won't select the goods now. You see, I'm just looking for a friend." "There's another roll on the shelf," said the salesman; "I'll take it down if you think your friend is likely to be in it."—Puck.

CHANGES IN BIRDS' HABITS.

With New Conditions Come Adaptations Dictated by Reason. Among the familiar examples of the changes in the habits of birds which have resulted from association with mankind are those of the chimney swift, or popularly named "chimney swallow," which formerly nested in the hollows of trees and now in all settled regions using the chimneys of the houses, and the barn and cave swallows, the former originally nesting in caves and now building on the beams and rafters of barns, and the latter, once a cliff-dweller, now attaching its curious mud tement under the shelter of the eaves of barns and dwellings.

In a series of interesting notes in the Auk on the changes in the habits of birds George F. Bremlinger records having observed in Mexico the old and the new way of swallow-nesting. In the ancient town of Tuxpan he found numerous instances of barn swallows nesting in the living rooms, and in the unsettled portions of the State of Chihuahua, 100 miles back from the railroad on one of the large haciendas—a region devoid of the time-honored adobe—barn swallows still nested on the rocks.

Mr. Bremlinger notes other changes in the nesting habits due to the removal of large timber. There is, for example, the Lucy's warbler, which normally nests in natural cavities in the trunks of trees, most commonly in the mesquite, but in the vicinity of Tucson, where the larger trees have been cut away, the warblers have in some instances had recourse to rebuilding their nests in the abandoned nests of other species, and most curious of all, among the small limbs of a mesquite tree.

In timbered countries the flickers cut holes in the trunks of trees for their nests. In some sections, where the large trees have been removed and the flickers have no longer such nesting sites, they have taken to the telegraph poles. "Along the railroad between Benson and Bisbee, Ariz.," writes Mr. Bremlinger, "the telegraph poles and fence posts show evidence of the work of woodpeckers, all by the Texan woodpecker. Throughout this region trees are few and the woodpeckers are forced to use anything that is dead and large enough to permit of a nesting cavity being excavated in it. Dead stalks of the century plant are often used. About Phoenix, Ariz., this woodpecker is common. Timber to their needs is still in abundance and the poles along the railroads and elsewhere are untouched. In some parts of Mexico the work of woodpeckers on telegraph poles has reached the stage of a nuisance and a source of much outlay of money to keep the line in repair. Over a piece of road running between San Luis Potosi and Tampico the nuisance has become so great that the management threatened to dip the poles in a solution of creosote."—Forest and Stream.

Insistent Politeness. Good-tempered, kind-hearted, and liked even by the Russians, is the description which the author of "With Russian, Japanese and Chinese" applies to the Japanese soldier. He also gives an illustration of the determination of the Japanese, even when the object is courtesy. When, after the Battle of Tashihchia, the Russian garrison evacuated Nuchwang by order of General Kuropatkin, the Japanese were not long in taking command of the place. Two scouts were the first to enter the town. They rode straight to the civil administration buildings. There, in one of the smaller rooms, they came upon a Russian soldier who had managed to get left behind his brothers-in-arms. He slowly rose from behind some furniture and faced his captors. They smiled amiably at him, and, reassured, he pulled off his cap and commenced to fan himself with it.

Now it is a common custom for the Japanese soldier, in war and peace, to carry about with him in the hot weather a small fan. On this occasion a fan was forthcoming, and handed to the Russian. He refused to take it, preferring to use the cap. Still with an amiable smile on his face, one of the Japanese, a short man with abnormally broad shoulders, again proffered the rejected fan with the left hand, at the same time covering him with a revolver.

The captive took the gift without further reluctance and fanned himself with vigor. It cooled him far more than the cap. Bird Surgeons. Certain birds seem to possess a remarkable instinct for surgery. The woodcock, the partridge and some others are said to be able to dress their wounds with considerable skill. A naturalist observes that he has shot several woodcock that were recovering from wounds previously received. In every instance he found the injury neatly dressed with down plucked from the stems of feathers and skillfully arranged over the wound, evidently by the long beak of the bird. In other cases ligatures had been applied to wounded or broken limbs.

A Good Thing. "This is an interesting clock, Miss," said the salesman, "you really should have one, especially if you're bothered with tire some callers." "It's merely a cuckoo clock, isn't it?" asked Miss May Pechis. "Yes, but beginning at 10 p. m. instead of saying 'cuck-ko' every quarter hour it yells, 'Go home! Go home!'"—Philadelphia Press.

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

HUMILIATING—VILE—DESTRUCTIVE

The very name, Contagious Blood Poison, suggests contamination and dread. It is the worst disease the world has ever known; responsible for more unhappiness and sorrow than all others combined. Nobody knows anything about the origin of this loathsome trouble, but as far back as history goes it has been regarded the greatest curse of mankind.

No part of the body is beyond the reach of this powerful poison. No matter how pure the blood may be, when the virus of Contagious Blood Poison enters, the entire circulation becomes corrupted, the humiliating symptoms begin to appear, and the sufferer finds himself diseased from head to foot with the vilest and most destructive of all poisons. Usually the first symptom is a small sore or ulcer, so insignificant that it rarely ever excites suspicion, but in a short while the skin breaks out in a red rash, the glands of the groin swell, the throat and mouth ulcerate, the hair and eye-brows come out, and often the body is covered with copper-colored spots, pustular eruptions and sores.

There is hardly any limit to the ravages of Contagious Blood Poison; if it is not driven from the blood it affects the nerves, attacks the bones, and in extreme cases causes tumors to form on the brain, producing insanity and death. No other disease is so highly contagious; many an innocent person has become infected by using the same toilet articles, handling the clothing, by a friendly handshake or the kiss of affection from one afflicted. But no matter how the disease is contracted, the sufferer feels the humiliation and degradation that accompany the vile disorder.

Mercury and Potash are commonly used in the treatment of Contagious Blood Poison, but these minerals cannot cure the disease—they merely mask it in the system. All external evidences may disappear for a while, but the treacherous poison is at work on the internal members and tissues, and when these minerals are left off the disease returns worse than before, because the entire system has been weakened and damaged by the strong action of the Mercury and Potash. There is but one certain, reliable cure for Contagious Blood Poison, and that is S. S. S., the great vegetable blood purifier. It attacks the disease in the right way by going down into the blood, neutralizing and forcing out every particle of the poison. It makes the blood pure and rich, strengthens the different parts of the body, tones up the system, and cures this humiliating and destructive disorder permanently.

The improvement commences as soon as the patient gets under the influence of S. S. S. and continues until every vestige of the poison is driven from the blood and the sufferer is completely restored to health. S. S. S. is not an experiment; it is a success. It has cured thousands of cases of Contagious Blood Poison, many of which had given the Mercury and Potash treatment, Hot Springs, etc., a thorough trial, and had almost despaired of ever being well again. S. S. S. is made entirely of roots, herbs and barks, and does not injure the system in the least. We offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that it contains a particle of mineral of any kind. If you are suffering with this despicable and debasing disease, get it out of your blood with S. S. S. before it does further damage. We will gladly send our book with instructions for self-treatment and any medical advice, without charge, to all who write.

Will Row the Judgment Day. There is a shivery, shivery legend among the people who live along the Hudson River which is to the effect that that stream is the everlasting boiling waters of a specter who is personified as Ramhont Van Dam. Away back in colonial times Ramhont and his friends were drinking until late at night. Finally this man Ramhont started for home, some distance up the river, in his boat, swearing that he would row the distance if it took "a month of Sundays." Ramhont never reached home, and the superstitious people say that he has been condemned to row until Judgment day.

Afraid of the Smell. Bill—Although birds are credited with a sense of smell, an English expert finds turkeys indifferent to all odors. Jill—Well, I don't know; I've seen turkey trying to get a long distance away when a motor car was in the vicinity.—Yonkers Statesman.

Solved Again. "You think you will have a cook next week, sure?" asked the caller after a prolonged discussion of the servant problem. "I shall, if the girl has any regard whatever for the amenities of life," replied the hostess. "What do you mean?" "In order to be sure of her favor I have arranged a little dinner in her honor the first evening she is with us. Can't you come?"—Judge.
