PRISONERS AND CAPTIVES
By H. S. NERRIN

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Three years ago, in the Green Wood Sea, there was a very strange and mysterious event. The ship was the Nautilus, under the command of Captain Nemo. It was a small, square-rigged vessel, with a long, low hull. The crew were all women, and they were all dressed in black. The ship was called the "Nautilus," after the famous French submarine. It was owned by Captain Nemo, who was known to be a powerful and mysterious man.

One day, the ship was attacked by a fleet of pirate ships. The battle lasted for several hours, and the Nautilus was victorious. The captain and his crew were able to escape, and the pirate ships were destroyed. The Nautilus continued on its journey, exploring new parts of the world.

The ship was commanded by Captain Nemo, who was known to be a powerful and mysterious man. He was a great sailor, and he had a deep love for the sea. He was known to be a great leader, and his crew looked up to him. He was a man of mystery, and he always kept his true identity hidden. He was a man of great courage, and he always faced danger head-on.

Chapter Thirty-Seven

The Nautilus was still sailing around the world, exploring new parts of the world. The crew were all women, and they were all dressed in black. The ship was called the "Nautilus," after the famous French submarine. It was owned by Captain Nemo, who was known to be a powerful and mysterious man.

One day, the ship was attacked by a fleet of pirate ships. The battle lasted for several hours, and the Nautilus was victorious. The captain and his crew were able to escape, and the pirate ships were destroyed. The Nautilus continued on its journey, exploring new parts of the world.

The ship was commanded by Captain Nemo, who was known to be a powerful and mysterious man. He was a great sailor, and he had a deep love for the sea. He was known to be a great leader, and his crew looked up to him. He was a man of mystery, and he always kept his true identity hidden. He was a man of great courage, and he always faced danger head-on.