MINING IN NOME IS COSTLY.

Two Dollars Speat for Every One Taken Out of the Ground.

More than double the amount of money taken out in gold in the Nome district was expended during the inst senson in the purchase of supplies and development work. In other words, two dollars were expended for every dollarthat was taken out of the ground in the form of mineral wealth. The Nome district produced about $6,000,000 in. gold and $12,000,000 or even more was expended in the district.

This is according to a conservative estimate made by John Rigby, chief engineer of the Nome Improvement Company, who has returned to Portland for the winter.

"Lust season was a poor one," Mr. Itighy said, "because of the dry weathhim, and" here the conductor paused er, the consequent low water interfering with much of the placer mining. kle in his eye- "he reached out two With pienty of water the output would have been much larger, "Much of the money expended in Nome this year was in development work, from which the investors will not realize, if at all, until later. The men who took out the money are not the ones who spent the most money. Those who are after the gold are the ones who spend the most. The history We offer One Hundred Bullars Beward for of nearly all mining camps is that my case of talarth that cannot be cored by more money is spent than is taken out

"Nome is still the camp of the small miner. The hig companies have not grabbed up everything as yet and will not until the rich pay streaks are exhausted. When the rich pockets have all been found and only the low grade ore and sands remain to be mined the big companies will have to do it, as test kind or operating requires a big initial investment. There are hundreds of individual miners near Nome who are working small placer claims. "There are hundreds of claims around Nome which are tied up in litigation and because of the many lawsuits the production of gold is not as large as it would be if all the claims were free. The federal court is crowded with work and is a year behind.

"During 1900 and 1901 there was a great rush into Nome, People were wild in their pursuits of wealth and they had been led to believe that all of the land near Nome for miles around was good. So they staked out thousands of claims. Ecventually they drifted back to the States and for the most part left their claims in the hands of others, to whom they gave the pow er of attorney.

"But little development work was done on the claims and in later years things that disagree with them, and in many of them have been relocated. Rich deposits were overlooked by the first locaters. Learning that the old claims were of value, many of the original locators or those who represent them are now trying to renew possession of them. This is the cause of the constant litigation."-Portland Orego-
