Largest Flood Seen Here for Many Years

For thirty-three hours the rain poured down upon the east end of the city, sending the waterways far above their banks, and plowing a path of destruction where none had passed before. From the banks of the Willamette, the Columbia, the Sandy, and the Tualatin, the waves rolled toward the center of the city. The wind, pouring down from the west, added its force to that of the rain, and the waves broke and dashed against the buildings, making it impossible to be outside. The climate was a little warmer than usual, and the water was not especially cold. However, the people were not unduly perturbed, as the water receded in the late afternoon.

Unforeseen obstacles were encountered in the situation when the electricity failed. The water pressure was lost, and the pumps could not be started. The water poured into the streets, and the streets became streams. The schools were closed, and the streets were deserted. The newspapers were not printed.

Sunday Survivors of the Deluge

The evacuees of the Willamette Valley were gathered at the Oregon State Fairgrounds, under the direction of Governor H. C. Madsen, who was in charge of the evacuation. The Governor was accompanied by Major General J. E. Young, who was in charge of the military. At the Governor's request, the military had been called out to aid in the rescue work.

Daily updates on the situation were broadcast over the radio, and the public was urged to remain calm and to assist in the rescue work. The Governor requested that all able-bodied men report to the Fairgrounds, where they would be assigned to the rescue work.

The Governor stated that the situation was serious, but that the people of the state were determined to overcome the difficulties. He thanked the military for their assistance and asked the people to continue to work together to overcome the disaster.

The Governor also announced that the state would provide food and shelter for those who had been affected by the flood. He asked the people to remain calm and to continue to work together.

The Governor ended his address by thanking the people of the state for their cooperation and asking them to continue to work together to overcome the disaster.

---

Dr. T. S. Harschall, Evangelist

his last words found in the old chapter of the Oregon's Bibles. The text is a glimpse into the life of a man who dedicated his life to the service of his community. His words are a testament to his dedication and his love for his fellow humans.

Dr. Harschall's words are a reminder to us all of the importance of unity and cooperation in times of crisis. His words are a call to action, to work together to overcome the difficulties and to remain calm in the face of adversity.

---

The Tidings

The Tidings is a newspaper published in Portland, Oregon. The newspaper is known for its coverage of local news and events, and for its historical significance. The newspaper was established in 1851, and it has been published continuously since that time.

The newspaper covers a wide range of topics, from local news and events to national and international events. The newspaper is known for its in-depth coverage of local news, and for its role in shaping the public discourse in the city.

The newspaper is published weekly, and it is available for purchase in local newspapers and online.

---

HOLDING STABLES! Livery Feed & Sale

The Boulder Oregonian, August 17, 1920

FASHION STABLES! Livery Feed & Sale

Portland, Ore.

Cottage Grove, Ore.

The Hedge Hogs give a perfect separation of Zinc Lead Dres

JOHN A. TRAYLOR

MINING MACHINERY

MINING MACHINERY

Cottage Grove, Oreg.

H. C. MADSEN, Proprietor.

New Timetable.

Above and Below...•

COTTAGE GROVE, OR.

H. C. MADSSEN.

NEW TIMETABLE.

Hospital and Sanitation

Northwest

Electricity

Telephone

Cottage Grove, Ore.

O. S. & E. R. CO.

New Timetable.

Electricity, Telephone

Dr. H. C. SCHLECK.

New Timetable.

New Timetable.

New Timetable.

New Timetable.

New Timetable.

New Timetable.

New Timetable.

New Timetable.

New Timetable.

New Timetable.