THE CHARITY GIRL

By EFFIE A. ROWLANDS

Chapter I

"And it isn't a very pretty sight, and very noisy, oh! And I say, as we go by, what if they'll start the new one?"

"I don't know, dear. It may be too much to expect," the woman said quietly.

"Yes, it may be. I wonder what's the matter with them. What do you think they'll do?"

"I don't know, dear. It may be too much to expect."

The woman was not very happy, for all the children had been very troublesome that day, and the woman was tired.

Ashley had also been of a very busy sort, and he was very anxious to get home. He had been very busy that day, and he was very anxious to get home.

He had been very busy that day, and he was very anxious to get home.

Chapter II

As Ashley went home the sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.

The sun shone on his face, and the wind blew through his hair. He was very happy, for he had finished his work, and he was very happy.