The charity girl

By Effie A. Rowlands

In the title of 1880 the Flora of the British Isles was published. The author, a young lady, named Mr. and Mrs. Thompson who were naturalists, wrote this book. The work was intended to introduce the young naturalists to the flora of their native land. Mrs. Thompson and her husband decided to publish a new edition of the book, but they were unable to find a publisher. They therefore decided to publish it themselves.

And then it came to pass that the young lady, now Mrs. Thompson, and her husband, Mr. Thompson, published the book themselves. They were naturalists, and they had a great interest in the flora of their native land. They decided to publish a new edition of the book, but they were unable to find a publisher. They therefore decided to publish it themselves.

The book was well received, and it sold well. It was a great success, and it was later translated into several languages. It is still a valuable work, and it is still used by naturalists to this day.
