BOHEMIA NUGGETS

Devoted to the Mining, Lumbering and Farming Interests of this Community.

Vol. IX
Cottage Grove, Lane County, Oregon, Wednesday, November 6, 1907.

No 40

FARMERS MAKING MONEY
Farmers of Rural Districts from Bank Accoutnts Due to Prosperity.

"I'd like to have a lot of the farming community at a little tea party around the great State of Washington this next week, and I'll want you to have a present of about 300 of these little tea parties where you address all the farmers in your community."

W. S. Young today.

The record-breaking increase in the value of agricultural products for 1907 is a clear indication of the fact that the prosperity of the farmer is being heralded by the prosperity of the whole community.

The farmers of the rural districts are finding that the bank accounts due to prosperity are not only a source of income, but also a means of investment. The increased value of their crops and livestock has enabled them to make substantial payments on their bank accounts, and to make investments in farm improvements.

The banks of the rural districts are now offering special rates of interest to farmers who wish to make investments in their accounts. These rates are designed to encourage farmers to save and invest their money, and to make their bank accounts more attractive as a source of income.

The agricultural community is being urged to take advantage of these special rates of interest, and to make the most of their bank accounts as a source of income and investment.

FARMERS MAKING MONEY
Farmers of Rural Districts from Bank Accoutnts Due to Prosperity.

"I'd like to have a lot of the farming community at a little tea party around the great State of Washington this next week, and I'll want you to have a present of about 300 of these little tea parties where you address all the farmers in your community."

W. S. Young today.

The record-breaking increase in the value of agricultural products for 1907 is a clear indication of the fact that the prosperity of the farmer is being heralded by the prosperity of the whole community.

The farmers of the rural districts are finding that the bank accounts due to prosperity are not only a source of income, but also a means of investment. The increased value of their crops and livestock has enabled them to make substantial payments on their bank accounts, and to make investments in farm improvements.

The banks of the rural districts are now offering special rates of interest to farmers who wish to make investments in their accounts. These rates are designed to encourage farmers to save and invest their money, and to make their bank accounts more attractive as a source of income.

The agricultural community is being urged to take advantage of these special rates of interest, and to make the most of their bank accounts as a source of income and investment.

RECEIVED FROM THE STATE.

Mr. H. S. Young of Cottage Grove.

The following report of the Division of Labor Statistics for the State of Oregon for the year 1907 is received:

"The agricultural community is being urged to take advantage of these special rates of interest, and to make the most of their bank accounts as a source of income and investment.

The agricultural community is being urged to take advantage of these special rates of interest, and to make the most of their bank accounts as a source of income and investment."