Prof. Tyler, of Amherst college said recently: "A man can live comfortably without brains; no man ever existed without a digestive system. The dyspeptic has neither faith, hope or charity." Mrs. J. H. Chambers entertained the ladies of the Woman's club of Cottage Grove at her home on last Saturday afternoon. The event was the bi-weekly gathering of the club members who have staid at home during the hot season, and was made a cooling off day. The ladies took everything easy, and planned their cool trips to the hills and sea shore. Mrs. Chambers furnishing the ice cream and cake and good soft drinks to cool the heated discussions and delight the ladies taste. The club does not get down to hard practical work until in October when it starts its winter course of study and the preparation of elaborate thesis on the topics of the day and age.
The postmistress at Gold Hill, Oregon, Miss Lizzie Caughlin has been subjected recently to a severe government investigation as a result of her queer methods of handling the postoffice. She opened letters, held money orders, and only turned over such mail as she pleased. She has made irregular payments of thousands of dollars through money orders, and it is thought has violated every Postal rule in her two years term, but has never profited a penny by her peculiar transactions. She is also in charge of the telephone office and maintains a rigid censorship on all news. Her faculty of accounting for any and all discrepancies is the wonder of everybody.

Fred Russel of the Chambers Lumber Co. was in town Tuesday, and came back Friday again, going north on business. The party that has been spending the summer at Mr. Russels camp broke up and Mrs. Russel made a trip to the great Yellowstone Park with the party and is now returning home. Mr. Russel has found it rather lonesome after the whole jolly camp left, leaving him in solitary glory, with the Japanese cook.
Mr. Anderson, the representative of the Pacific Timber Co. was down at Leona on Tuesday and Wednesday selling P. T. Co. timber lands. Mr. Anderson says when the only place he has to sleep hereafter when out in the woods is an old bunk house, he will betake himself to the crotch of a tree, rather than run the risk of being eaten up by a thousand rats, from which we infer that his nights rest in a bunk house down there must have been somewhat disturbed.

Preparing For Ice Plant.
J. H. Bartels commenced the work of taking out the smoke house and machinery in the wooden building back of his market building, erected last year, in preparation for moving away the modern building, and extending the new building through to the alley. The extension will probably be several feet higher than the old part and will contain a large ice storage room on the main floor in addition to the space to be occupied by the ice making machinery. The tanks in which the ice will be frozen will be located directly over the storage room so the ice can be lowered through the ceiling into the room.
Mr. Bartels has decided to install the can system, each block of ice being made by filling a large can with either holed or distilled water, which is then lowered into the freezing brine, which freezes the cake 24-36 hours, and weighs about 280 pounds. At present Mr. Bartels is studying over the question of whether the city water will have to be distilled, or if it will be all right simply boiled, as he wants to have the system work satisfactorily.
He is also planning a change in his big cold storage plant, which will afford considerable extra room for the storage of eggs and butter, and hopes to have the entire plant in good running order long before spring. Mr. Bartels has a firm faith in the prosperity of Cottage Grove, and wants to keep up with it.

Ruth Osmond.
Ruth Osmond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Osmond of Cottage Grove died Wednesday evening of heart failure, and was buried Friday morning from the Christian Church at 10.30, the funeral services being conducted by Rev. Olson. Ruth was 5 years, 9 months and 2 days old, and has been sick for some time.
Bird Season Opens Oct. 1st.
In last week's paper in error the statement was made that the bird season opened Sept. 1st, which was an error and should have read Oct. 1st.
Cotton in Bloom.
Rev. R. C. Grace having once lived in the southland where the cotton grows, thought that a cotton plant might be of interest to many people here who had never seen one, so a year ago he started it, and has very tenderly nursed it ever since, keeping it constantly protected from any draft or chill, and as a result has a plant about 10 inches high with a bloom on it, and a boll well developed. The bloom lasts but three days changing color as it passes. Mr. Grace hopes to be able to tend the plant so that the boll will open in about four weeks full of cotton.
Mr. Grace took the plant around to show to a number of citizens, and the editor, who has lived in the south, was almost stuck for a few minutes until he saw the boll.
The Brown Lumber Co. commenced using its storage pond this week and soon expects to have it well filled up.
