

FOR MARGUERITE

"Success with you is only another name for money,"

"Money," the girl interrupted, with that lovely light laugh. "I know it, Gerard, and despise me for it if you will. If you had brought up in poverty, if you had wanted frocks and pretty shoes and dances and pleasures of every kind—and, oh, thousands of things that you couldn't get—then you, too, would spell success with an M—a very big M—and call it money! You would, I know you would," she ended bitterly.

The man sighed heavily. Fate was indeed against him now, and his career, light and hopeful as it looked a short time ago, seemed sadly dull and somber now. And why? Because of that lovely face that was turned away from him so petulantly.

He would say one more thing before they parted, he determined suddenly. He would have at any rate a clear understanding with the woman he loved so madly. And after that then the venture—to the right or to the left!

He put out his hand to stay her as she would have risen. "I want to ask you one thing more," he said so gently that her wandering attention was fixed on him once again.

"If I went into the business, my father's business, which as you know, I hate—if I gave up my dreams of the bar and a life which I should love, a life which would be poor perhaps, but full of promise—if I had the prospect of success in the business of which you speak so highly, what then?"

She turned to him with a new light sparkling in her beautiful eyes. Had she compared at last—everything, every hope, every ambition at her feet?

"Then," she said, her voice tender with feeling and her soft eyelids drooping above the brilliant eyes, "then I should say no more." And her tones trembled into silence, and her white hands played nervously with the violets at the bosom of her delicate gown.

COW HORN TURNIP.

Has Been Used With Benefit For Changing Soil Texture.

Much has been said of the cow horn turnip as a soil improver, or, rather, ameliorator, as it is supposed to benefit more by changing the soil texture than by bringing in new fertilizing material, like clover and other legumes. It will grow in unproductive clay soils and bores deep into the ground, opening up by its decay in winter the deeper compact layers and adding a most appreciable amount of humus. The seeds are commonly sown with crimson clover in August or September in corn or on fields that might otherwise remain bare through winter. It has been used in this manner with perceptible benefit on Hope farm and in thousands of other trials throughout the country.

A Handy Plant.

In bringing a newly purchased addition into cultivation we concluded to use this handy plant. The plot was deeply plowed in June, after the evergreen nursery that had occupied it many years had been removed, and twice harrowed at intervals of a fortnight to kill sprouting weeds and drag off the numerous roots. A portion was planted with late table corn, fertilizing with manure in the hill. Crimson clover and cow horn turnips at the rate of four ounces turnip to fifteen pounds clover seed were sown on the remainder Aug. 30, working it in with an ordinary cultivator.

Mixed Seeds.

Mixed seeds were later sown in the same proportion at the last working of the corn in September. We tried to sow the clover at the rate of fifteen pounds to the acre and secured a thick stand for soil in such poor condition. There was abundance of rain, enabling the clover to smother the turnips almost completely in the early spring, but in the corn there was a good stand, entirely covering the clover in many places.—Rural New Yorker.

Kansas Hot Wallow.

Farmers in the Kansas oil fields report great results from a novel use of crude oil. For lice on hogs they find the costly dipping tank unnecessary. The ordinary hot wallow is better. A thin layer of crude oil is poured over the water in the wallow. The hogs do the rest. Every louse, tick, flea and other pests is destroyed. The hogs are said to learn very soon to swim the oil and swallow it, to their great advantage.

If the water dries up, the oil rests on the bottom of the wallow until the next rain, when it rises to the top and is ready for business as before.

For the chickens the interior of the henhouse is painted all over, including the floor, with crude oil. Two applications a year are reported to be sufficient to insure immunity from all parasites.

Crude oil is cheap. A barrel of it should be kept and used on every farm. The small enemies of stock cause great discomfort to the animals and reduce the profits of the owners.

Housing Stock in Winter.

Horses that are rousing in winter can take care of themselves if they have a shed to go in when they desire shelter. The work horse should be provided a warm barn or else blanketed. A sweaty horse will not remain sound if put in a cold barn without blanketing.

Poultry, like sheep, can stand a great deal of cold if it is only dry cold. Hens that are given plenty of exercise in a sunny scratching shed that may be entirely open on good days and curtained with cloth on stormy days will be healthy and lay in the coldest weather if fed properly.

The keynote of shelter for stock is a dry place with plenty of sunshine. Give all the liberty possible, and they will seek shelter when they feel the need of it.—Successful Farming.

Notes About Hogs.

Large herds of swine should be divided, so that not more than a few dozen animals are kept together.

Each sow should have a separate pen for herself and her pigs.

The pens, troughs and all the surroundings of the hog should not only be cleaned frequently, but disinfected. The food for swine should be selected carefully.

Do not feed corn exclusively, and be careful to supply enough green food in the winter time.

Sorghum is especially recommended as a winter food.

Always heat the hog's food in cold weather, for the animal's comfort and well being.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. Watering Fowls in Winter.

It is difficult to supply fresh water to poultry when the weather is severely cold, as the water freezes and cannot be used. Earthenware fountains are often broken by expansion during freezing, and the only convenient method of providing water is with the aid of wooden troughs, which can be sealed and kept clean with ease. To avoid freezing some poultrymen adopt the plan of watering their fowls three times a day, using tepid water, and the birds soon become accustomed to the practice. Immediately after the hens have finished drinking the troughs are emptied, placed on end out of the way and used only when the next watering of the flock occurs.
