Items of Interest In a Condensed Form.

AS TAKEN FROM OUR EXCHANGES

A Resume of the Week's Local Happenings of the State and County Briefly Told.

The Dalles has only twenty-nine saloons.

Wallowa has no marshal, and the council has held but one meeting since election last April.

To start a creamery at McMinnville, 35,000 pounds of milk are needed, and as over 3,000 cows are "in sight," nearly 50,000 pounds are assured.

La Grande's new brick-making plant is now turning out about 34,000 per day. There are in all stages a million of brick in the yards. A kiln of 325,000 was opened a few days ago, another of 375,000 is ready for the torch.

A man near Eugene had twelve and a half tons of cherries from scant two acres. He got $100 per ton for them. The trees are yet young, but last year they brought him $900 and the year before over $800.

More than two feet square of the skin of a nine-year old Corvallis boy was burned off and grafting may have to be restored to, and if he recovers he will have to suffer terribly for weeks, all due to Fourth of July fire-crackers.

Far up on the Willamette river in Lane county near the little town of Walker, there is a tract of land which is rich with strata of various colored Sienna, the king of paint pigments. A factory will be built and operated by Salem parties.

Corvallis Times: On every hand there are buildings going up, and in most cases they are of good character. Every impression gained by those who observe the condition is that Corvallis' growth is not a boom affair, but a steady and persistent growth of persistent and enduring character.

The Grand Council of the Order of Redmen of Oregon was held at Newport this week.

J. E. Franklin, formerly station agent for the Corvallis & Eastern at Toledo, Oregon, was arraigned in the United States Circuit Court Monday on a charge of sending an obscene letter through the mails. He was given until August 12th to plead. Franklin was arrested at Tacoma last week being charged with sending an objectionable letter to A. J. McMullan at Rock Bridge, British Columbia.

Bingling Bros. circus will be in Eugene August 30th.

W. L. Coppertoll is having the wood cut out on his Bailey Hill road ranch hauled in. He has 500 cords of second growth fir, and is stacking it up on West Eighth street for a winter supply. He has not set any price on it at all yet, but will wait for the winter demand.—Register.

Prunes brought more money into the state last year than any other one fruit, and they will bring in 50 per cent more money this year than last.

Marcola has grown during the last three years from a hamlet consisting of a store and half a dozen houses to a flourishing town of several hundred people, and is to have a new school house.

Much more wheat will be shipped from The Dalles this season than for years. A good deal will come from south of the river. A large amount will come down the north bank road and be crossed and hauled there.

A man near Echo has seven acres of potatoes and has dug one acre of them, and the yield was 200 sacks, which he sold for $2. a sack. Four hundred dollars from an acre of potatoes beats wheat farming, says the Register.

On South Prairie in Tillamook county, women help in the hay fields as well as mowing the hay in the barns. One woman said she didn't mind the work in the field but she didn't like to see the men lying around the house while she cooked the meals.

How the National Forests Serve the Public and Their Objects.

"The Use of the National Forests," a publication just printed by the Department of agriculture, is a brief, clear manual for public information as to the forest policy of the National Government.

It is too true, as the short preface to the public says, that "many people do not know what National Forests are. Others may have heard much about them, but have no idea of their true purpose and use." It is the object of this publication to explain just what the National Forest mean, what they are for, and how to use them.

In the first place it is explained how the Forests are created and how their boundaries are drawn. Next, their direct use and value are shown from the point of view of the homeseeker, prospector and miner, the user of timber, the user of the range, the user of water, and other users of Forest resources. Third, it is shown how the Forests are intended for use, for the production of usable products, and for the establishment and maintenance of homes; how on all of them the timber is protected from fire, the water flow is kept steady, the forage of the range is increased and guarded from abuse; and how, in addition, they serve as great public playgrounds and as breeding places and refuges for game. Finally the management of the National Forests is described.

Here it is that the great usefulness of the Forests is brought out most clearly and strikingly; for the Forests are managed by the people in their own interests, and every means is used to meet the desires and wants of all Forest users half way by dealing with them in the main directly on the ground and in all cases with the utmost practical dispatch and freedom from red tape.

In a word, the special interest of this manual lies in its showing that the Forest policy of the Government, both in principle and in practice, is for the benefit of the ordinary man, for the benefit of every citizen equally. There is still a tendency to think of the National Forests as "preserves" closed to use, and to leave the public lands exposed to unregulated individual exploitation. Where these misapprehensions still prevail "The Use of the National Forests" will go far to correct them.

The book is written by Mr. Frederick E. Olmsted, whose intimate knowledge of conditions in the West and the policy under which the National Forests are managed especially fits him to deal with the subject.

The Fashionable Colors for the Coming Winter.

"Blue will be high in favor this fall and winter," writes Grace Margaret Gould, the Fashion Editor in the August number of the Woman's Home Companion, "and that certainly is good news, because blue is pretty apt to be becoming to pretty nearly everybody. Navy and royal blue are both looked upon as fashion leaders. Copenhagen blue and Nattier blue, or old blue, are both high-style shades.

"Many brown shades will also be used—russet, Havana and the leather shades. Browns showing a coppery tinge will be modish, as well as deep mahogany tones. In greens we have the preference given to forest green, which is a beautiful rich leaf tint, not so yellow as olive and is much more becoming. It will be much seen in the plain fabrics. The bronze greens will also be worn. A beautiful deep American Beauty rose shade will be stamped the mode, and many Bordeaux reds will be favored. Two grays will be especially fashionable—the gray we see in silver and a
