As It Seemed to Him.
"Some people," remarked the demoralizer, "never seem to be around when wanted."
"Well," rejoined the moralizer, "it is better to be absent when wanted than to be present when you are not wanted."
Few men in Europe have had a more striking career than the Rev. Dr. Bishop Gabrea of the Spanish Reformed church, who was educated to the Catholic priesthood, but embraced the Protestant faith and became a voluntary exile to Gibraltar, when he returned to lead the Evangelical party after the revolution in 1808.

TRADITIONS OF THE ORIENT.
Deities of India Known Under Many Names.
Of the countless attractions India offers none are greater than her rich stories of myth and tradition. Oriental scholars have unfolded for us that Hindoo religion in a dim and shadowy past contented itself with venerating some of nature's more impressive phenomena. Space, the starry firmament and the light of day—under the poetic names of Arditi, Varuna and Mitra—provided the sacred triad of this archaic worship; but with the march of centuries there came an added roll of deities of which Brahma himself was chief, says the London Lady. According to some writers, his two brothers, Vishnu and Shiva, were equally powerful, the former as preserver of Brahma's creations, the latter as destroyer. Vishnu is famous for his countless metamorphoses and appears in the sacred books under no fewer than 1,000 different names. He remains the most popular deity among the Hindoos, who believe his final metamorphosis—that of a horse—is yet to come. While awaiting this last chance he is thought to be resting in a sea of milk, with a serpent for his pillow. The River Ganges is supposed to issue from his right foot.

The god Shiva also figures in Hindoo mythology under 1,000 different names, and is invariably represented in some repellent form. Idols show him at one time with five faces, at another with three eyes, while a third will represent him with a necklace of skulls, thick, matted hair and a horn projecting from one of his temples. The great rock-cut temple of the Island of Elephants is sacred to this god. Around the rain god of India have gathered countless traditions, among which are those of his constant conflicts with his thunder-bolt, Vajar; Vaya, the wind god; Shushna, the parcher, and Ah, the confiner. The aim of this last named god is to confine and dry up the rivers and seas. Much homage is paid to Indra by the other gods, according to the Rig-Vedas, he being head of the heaven of the gods. He appears to have drunk freely of soma, the nectar of the Hindoo deities.

An ideal light that the sacred writings would wish him to be viewed in must fall when one reads of the hymns put in his mouth by the mystic scribes. It is a natural outcome of India's climate that Indra should enter largely into her scheme of legend. Just as Apollo and Baldu, the Norse sun god, provided so much mythical charm in cooler regions, so does Indra in the land of parching plains and scorching rays. A Hindoo bride is not greeted with pretty wishes that the sun should light her path; the shimmering rain-drop, Indra's precious gift, is the blessing invoked on the head of the Indian child-wife.

Among the arts that Indra is supposed to delight in are those of music and dancing. The sacred books relate how hosts of beautiful damsels, called Asparans, fill his heavenly courts. Tradition gives them a dwelling place on earth as well as in heaven, their office being to test the virtue of hermits in their solitude. It was hard on these lovely beings that, should they succeed in their arts, they should immediately be turned to pillars of stone. It is part of the Brahman creed that Sarasvati, Brahma's wife, gave the vina to mankind, the god Nareda show them how it was played and teaching them the sacred hymns that called down the thrice-blessed rain and veiled the blazing skies with cloud.

To the god Krishna music has a special consecration, his traditional companions on each being the gopis (shepherdesses), who drew gazelles after them when they sang to the vinas. All sorts of pretty traditions gather round this god in connection with music. Its soothing virtues, however, did not overrule his ruder qualities, for he gloried in war and was guilty of many individual massacres. His warriors when dying were always laid on arrows, dart upward, in order to the last that they should be goaded into consciousness and listen to long addresses from holy men on the transmigration of souls. With the passing of the ages Buddha appears on the scenes of Hindoo belief and myth.

OLD SORES FED AND KEPT OPEN BY IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD
Whenever a sore refuses to heal it is because the blood is not pure and healthy, as it should be, but is infected with poisonous germs or some old blood taint which has corrupted and polluted the circulation. Those most usually afflicted with old sores are persons who have reached or passed middle life. The vitality of the blood and strength of the system have naturally begun to decline, and the poisonous germs which have accumulated because of a sluggish and inactive condition of the system, or some hereditary taint which has hitherto been held in check, now force an outlet on the face, arms, legs or other part of the body. The place grows red and angry, festers and eats into the surrounding tissue until it becomes a chronic and stubborn ulcer, fed and kept open by the impurities with which the blood is saturated. Nothing is more trying and disagreeable than a stubborn, non-healing sore. The very fact that it resists ordinary remedies and treatments is good reason for suspicion; the same germ-producing cancerous ulcers is back of every old sore, and especially is this true if the trouble is an inherited one. Washes, salves, nor indeed anything else, applied directly to the sore, can do any permanent good; neither will removing the sore with caustic plasters or the surgeon's knife make a lasting cure. If every particle of the diseased flesh were taken away another sore would come, because the trouble is in the blood, and the BLOOD CANNOT BE CUT AWAY. The cure must come by a thorough cleansing of the blood. In S. S. S. will be found a remedy for sores and ulcers of every kind. It is an unequalled blood purifier—one that goes directly into the circulation and promptly cleanses it of all poisons and taints. It gets down to the very bottom of the trouble and forces out every trace of impurity and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. changes the quality of the blood so that instead of feeding the diseased parts with impurities, it nourishes the irritated, inflamed flesh with healthy blood. Then the sore begins to heal, new flesh is formed, all pain and inflammation leaves, the place scabs over, and when S. S. S. has purified the blood the sore is permanently cured. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Write for our special book on sores and ulcers and any other medical advice you desire. We make no charge for the book or advice.

Winding a Watch.
"You wouldn't think," said a watchmaker to a New York Sun man, "that it would make any difference whether a watch is wound up in the morning or at night, but it does make considerable difference."
"When a watch is wound up at night, coming out of a warm pocket, and laid down or hung up in a cool place, the mainspring will contract by the cooling off of the metals. Being wound up tightly all chance of contracting has been shut off and the spring is bound to break."
"If, however, the watch is wound up in the morning, having partly run down through the night, there is room enough left in the barrel to contract. Another reason why it should be wound up in the morning is that the spring will then have more power and thus will be in a better condition to resist the disturbing movement of the bearer during the daytime."
"Being generally in a horizontal position during the night and running with less power, the horizontal position in which the balance runs more freely, will operate to make the length of the swing of the balance wheel during the night as nearly as possible the same as in the day time."
