

Peculiar to Itself

In combination, proportion and process, Hood's Sarsaparilla is therefore Peculiar to Itself in merit, sales and cures. It is made from the best blood-purifying, alterative and tonic ingredients by such original and peculiar methods as to retain the full medicinal value of each and all.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by druggists, 100 doses $1. Begin to take it today.

Sarsatabs For those who prefer medicine in tablet form, Hood's Sarsaparilla is now put in chocolate tablets called Sarsatabs, as well as in the usual liquid form. Sarsatabs have identically the same curative properties as the liquid form, besides accuracy of dose, convenience, economy,—there being no loss by evaporation, breakage or leakage. Sold by druggists or sent promptly by mail. Hood's Sarsaparilla Co., Lowell, Mass.

A Student. "Mildred," said the prudent mamma, "I want you to treat Mr. Ketchley, who called on you last evening, with some consideration and respect. He may not be particularly handsome or attractive, but he is sensible, well connected, highly successful in business, and is regarded as one of the coming men."

"I wouldn't mind his being one of the coming men," said Miss Mildred, "if it didn't take him so long to go."

Not at All. "I was held for four hours on a ferry boat one night when the mercury was down to zero."

"That was distressing."

"Wasn't it? Did you ever have such an experience?"

"We—II, I was held for about that length of time in our parlor the other night, but it was not at all distressing."—Houston Post.

For Thin, Poor Blood

You can trust a medicine tested 60 years! Sixty years of experience, think of that! Experience with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; the original Sarsaparilla; the strongest Sarsaparilla; the Sarsaparilla the doctors endorse for thin blood, weak nerves, general debility.

But even this grand old medicine cannot do its best work if the liver is inactive and the bowels constipated. For the best possible results, you should take laxative doses of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and keep the bowels regular. The liver will quickly respond, and so will the bowels.

THE ROCK OF CASHEL.

Historic Shrine, Which Was the Scene of an Awful Massacre.

Few, if any, ecclesiastical ruins in Ireland are more interesting than those which crown the far-famed Rock of Cashel. The rock itself is one of the most conspicuous landmarks in the south of Ireland and towers like another Gibraltar above the Golden Vale of Tipperary. For more than 1,000 years Cashel was the seat of the Kings of Munster and in the very days of St. Patrick the famous rock served the purposes of religion. In the middle of the fifth century a synod was held there, attended by St. Patrick, St. Ailbe and St. Declan, and it was then that King Aengus, who had been baptized by the great Irish apostle, commemorated his conversion from paganism to Catholicity by erecting a church upon the rock. Other buildings devoted to religious purposes were subsequently erected, the ruins of which still remain. These ruins comprise Cormac's Chapel, the erection of which is attributed to Cormac MacCullinan, King of Munster and Bishop of Cashel, who fell in battle in 908; a cathedral, built by Donald O'Brien, King of Limerick, in 1169; a hall for the vicars of the choral, built by Archbishop O'Hedican in 1421; an old episcopal palace, which was originally a strong castle; the remains of an abbey, founded by David MacCarvill in 1260, and a mysterious round tower, 56 feet in circumference and 90 feet high. There still exist several portions of the ancient wall by which the whole was formerly surrounded. Architecturally, Cormac's Chapel is the most graceful of all the buildings, exhibiting high finish of workmanship, and is proof of the high civilization in the arts which Ireland had reached at that period.

The ruins of the Rock of Cashel, like other ecclesiastical relics in Ireland, could tell many a tale of tragedy and many a glorious story of martyrdom. None is more thrilling than the dreadful massacre under the Irish Atilia, Morough O'Brien, Baron Inchiquin. It occurred during the wars which raged in Britain and Ireland between the Parliamentarian and Royalists, with the Catholics in Ireland forming at one time a distinct party.

O'Brien was a product of his times—the victim of an execrable English law inflicted upon the Irish people. This law constituted what is known as a Court of Wards, an institution created for the purpose of seizing the infant children of the Irish Catholic nobility and rearing them in hatred and horror of the faith of their fathers. O'Brien had been seized as a child and reared in this manner, but it cannot be said that he was taught to exemplify any of the virtues of Christianity.

O'Brien threw in his lot with the parliamentary forces, fighting against King Charles of England, who afterward lost his head at Whitehall, and received the command of the anti-royalist forces in Munster, with the title of president. He fought with fanatical zeal against the Catholics and royalist troops, burning and ravaging his way through Munster like a second Atilia. But the crowning act of his career was the massacre of Cashel. He besieged and stormed the city and then attacked the cathedral, in which women and children and others of the inhabitants had taken refuge. His soldiers were ordered to give no quarter and mercilessly they carried out the command. When the doors and windows had been riddled with volleys of musket balls the troopers were sent in to finish with pike and saber the work which the bullets had left incomplete. The floor of the cathedral was piled high with the bodies of the dead and twenty priests, who had sought shelter under the altar, were dragged out and slain. O'Brien reflected "credit" that day upon the Court of Wards.

Gone are the horrors of these times, but their memories endure. The peasantry of Tipperary still tell stories of Murrough of the Burnings, so called because of the towns and villages and humble homes he consigned to the flames. And before them rises the Rock of Cashel, hallowed in song and story and made sacred by martyrdom, to remind them of the dark and painful valley out of which their church has emerged triumphant.

AN ISOLATED HOSPITAL.

Mother Would Persist in Telling of Her Children's Sicknesses.

Mrs. Warren had seven children. Her new acquaintance at the seaside hotel had reason to know the fact. A genial, sympathetic spinster, without even nephews and nieces, was a goddess to the talkative and doting mother. She poured into the patient ears of the tolerant old maid the life-story of each of the seven little Warrens.

The differing temperaments of the children, the problems of getting their education, the arrangements for the coming-out of the oldest daughter, and for the camping-out of the youngest son—the conscientious scruples of Besie and the lawlessness of Clara—all these made the substance of the conversation during the first days of July. Still, by skillful management on the part of Miss Spinster, these questions could sometimes be used as introduction to

TRAVELING LIBRARIES

Wonderful Growth of Past Sixteen Years.

By Cornelia Marvin, Secretary Oregon Library Commission, Salem.

In 1905 traveling libraries had been authorized by law in twenty-five states. In sixteen of these, the libraries were in the direct charge of state libraries or library commissions.

This wonderful record of growth from the idea promulgated by Mr. Melville Dewey in 1892 is a most significant testimonial, not only that literacy is becoming popular, but that good taste in reading is to become an American habit. Time was when some of our scholars thought that bad reading was better than none at all. A well known teacher of English literature at one of our large universities stated to one of our clerks twenty years ago that it would be better for people to read even the "Fireside Companion" than to have no reading at all. In those days our rural population had little or nothing to read. Magazines were expensive, and the almshouse and county papers made a very meager literary diet. Even the doubtful good of having the cheap weekly papers thrust into the dooryard was denied the average farm home.

In these days, when the farmer is just as close to the heart of the world as the rest of us, if he chooses to be, he is greeted by a bewildering opportunity for choice among mediocres and even more vicious publications than the common weekly papers. There are capable men and women, highly cultivated and useful citizens, whose early reading was largely of the character then current in the cheap weeklies; but who shall dare to prophesy that the youth of today, whose literary excursions take him into the company of "Buster Brown" and "Happy Holligan," will have an even chance with the youth of a generation ago to develop into a useful and law-abiding citizen?

The influence of the dimes, the ten-cent, and the penny papers, which are so common and so easily obtained, is certainly not so quickly transmuted into bad conduct as that of the current yellow favorite.

Isolation had its advantages for the people on our farms. Today, the farmer's lad, only less than his city contemporary, has the worst that our times afford thrust upon him. In the cities, the public libraries are live to the necessity of getting people to read, and to read that which is, at least, not directly harmful, with strenuous efforts to promote the more vigorous and helpful sort of reading. That those in charge of traveling library systems are fully conscious that wise selection of the books means much to the commonwealth whose interests they serve, may be seen from the character of the books they are sending to the villages, country school and farm houses. It is recorded of one well selected and combined collection of 40 volumes that in three years it traveled over 2,000 miles, and has 918 recorded loans in 28 months of actual circulation in 8 different neighborhoods. Only 64 per cent of this circulation was fiction, so that these encouraging figures show that the miscellaneous books are being read and appreciated. What the general result of the circulation of this better class of books in more or less bookless communities is, no one may definitely know, but the librarian of any system of traveling libraries could find in the correspondence of her office innumerable and eloquent testimonials of the good work that is being done. So general is the belief that this class of literature will help people to live on farms and in villages more intelligently, and therefore more contentedly, that state workers in farmers' institutes have persistently acted as advocates of traveling libraries, with excellent and immediate results in many cases.

Oregon now has 95 state traveling libraries being sent to as many stations throughout the state. As these libraries belong to the state there is no charge for their use. Oregon people, wherever they may be located, may draw books from the Oregon Library Commission at Salem.

SLANG IN THE NAVY.

There is a Name for Almost Everything in the Navy.

The navy, like every other profession, has its own set slang, and the "argot" of those who serve under the white ensign is perhaps richer and more varied than that of any other calling, says the Pittsburgh Bulletin.

"Tinned beef is invariably referred to as the 'accident.' This is a somewhat suggestive name for the food in question and proves that the sea is conducive to the sense of humor. The "atmospherics" are the wireless telegraph operators, while "blue lights" stand for the gunner. "Bow lights" is the name given to any man who sports spectacles, while the signalman is known as the "bunting-tosser." A sailor's cap is described by the slang seaman as a "chafin grummet," and if a man is a habitual boaster it is said of him that he is always "chawing his fat."

The "chief buffer" is the chief boat-swain's mate, "chippy" is the carpenter, while the latter's mate and assistants are unkindly referred to as "wood-spoilers."

The hard-worked stoker has many names, being called among other things the "clinker" and the "clinker-knocker." Marines are called "jories," while the first lieutenant is usually referred to as "Jimmy-the-One." The master-at-arms rejoices in the mysterious title of "jonty."

When a sailor says he is "dining out" he means that he will be prevented by punishment from joining his messmates at a meal. The rum and water dispensed on certain days to Jack is affectionately referred to as "Fanny," the preserved mutton which he eats at dinner being called "Fanny Adams." The spoon with which he stirs his tea or coffee is called a "gibby."

A marine is contemptuously entitled a "leatherneck," a hammock is a "kipsey," and a sailor is a "datfoot." A seaman under the age of 20 is mysteriously referred to as a "Nordenflett," while a sailor with an unusually large cranium is called "nutty."

When a man is going on leave he announces that he is "on gens" (on general leave). A lazy fellow is known as a "proper phensant," while "raggie" is a term of endearment, since to be "raggie" or "brass rags" with a man (that is, to keep cleaning rags in the same bag as his) is to be sworn chums with that person.

If a sailor has a second helping at mess he calls it "rounding the buoy" and if, after overeating himself, he desires the official as the "poultice mixer." This name is also applied to the sick-boy attendants.

If a sailor is given to indulging in sentimental outbursts he is said to have his "sniveling valves" open; if he is doing a night watch on the quarter deck he is described as "studying astronomy" and if he has drunk not wisely but too well, he is called "in hatted."

Thrown Babies to Explorers.

Many strange adventures were encountered by Boyd Alexander in his journeyings in Africa. In one famine-stricken village young girls were offered to the party for food. Elsewhere the people, seeing before him, threw down babies in the hope of staying their hunger and so stopping the white men's advance.

Serious, Indeed!

To the principal of a school for poor boys in London the father of one of the lads wrote the following note in explanation of his son's absence from school: "Sir: Please excuse John for being away, as he has been very bad with information on the inside."

Some way a country girl looks worse with her cheeks painted than a town girl.

People too easily get in the habit of having troubles.

SAVING FRITTERS.

Scrape and grate the roots of a bunch of salsify. Mix a batter of two eggs, a gill of milk and enough flour to make of the desired consistency. Turn the salsify into this as soon as grated, as exposure to the air will blacken it. Salt to taste and drop the mixture by the spoonful into deep, boiling fat. As soon as brown, drain in a hot colander.

Tomato Relish.

One peck of tomatoes peeled cold, chop and let drain over night, six onions cut fine, three heads of celery, five red peppers, one small cup of salt, drain off and add two pounds of brown sugar, two ounces whole mustard seed, five cups of vinegar. Put in glass jars cold—do not cook.

S.S.S. OLD SORES

No old sore exists merely because the flesh is diseased at that particular spot; if this were true simple cleanliness and local applications would heal them. Whenever a sore or ulcer refuses to heal readily, the blood is at fault; this vital fluid is filled with impurities and poisons which are being constantly discharged into the place, feeding it with noxious matter and irritating and inflaming the nerves and tissues so the sore cannot heal. These impurities in the blood may be the remains of some constitutional trouble, the effect of a debilitating spell of sickness, leaving disease germs in the system, or the absorption by the blood of the fermented refuse matter which the bodily channels of waste have failed to remove. Again the cause may be hereditary, the diseased blood of ancestry being handed down to posterity; but whatever the cause, the fact that the sore will not heal shows the necessity for the very best constitutional treatment. There is nothing that causes more worry and anxiety than an old sore which resists treatment. Every symptom suggests pollution and disease—the discharge, the red, angry looking flesh, the pain and inflammation, and the discoloration of surrounding parts, all show that deep down in the blood there are morbid and dangerous forces at work, constantly creating poisons which may in the end lead to Cancer. Local applications are valuable only for their cleansing and antiseptic effects; they do not reach the blood, where the real cause is located, and can therefore have no real curative worth. S. S. S. heals old sores by going down to the fountain-head of the trouble and driving out the poison-producing germs and morbid matters which are keeping the ulcer open. It removes every particle of impurity from the circulation and makes this life-stream pure, fresh and health-sustaining. Then as new, rich blood is carried to the place the healing begins, all discharge ceases, the inflammation leaves, new tissue and healthy flesh are formed, and soon the sore or ulcer is well. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers and finest of tonics, just what is needed in the treatment, and in addition to curing the sore will build up and strengthen every part of the system. There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly falling to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only cure known to the world. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It offers one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, etc. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Tippling Evil in Mexico.
The tip question has become such a nuisance in Mexico city that some time ago the government of the federal district announced that cabmen, cagaros, mecapaleros, etc., who accepted tips, would be discharged. Unfortunately the public prefers to tip all these people rather than to hear themselves called by the far from sweet names that such people apply to non-tipping persons.

The majority of improved appliances designed to assist and lessen the work of the housewife are too complicated to warrant even a trial. To gain attention they must be exceedingly simple in construction, such as the dish drainer shown here, the invention of a New York man. This dish drainer is made a part of the dish pan, being hinged to the edge at one of the handles, so that it will not slip. The drainer is also in the form of a pan, having side wall to prevent the dishes falling to the ground when being drained. The water draining from the dishes descends down the inclined bottom of the drainer into the dish pan. A small upright serves to support the outer end of the drainer, and raise the drainer on an incline. The drainer and dish pan can be instantly separated or readjusted.
