The best is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is the best because it does the most good. While it makes the blood pure, fresh and lively, it tones the stomach to better digestion, creates an appetite, stimulates the kidneys and liver, gives new brain, nerve and digestive strength.

An unequaled list of cures-40,366 testimonials in two years - proves its merit.

Sarsatabs—For those who prefer medicine in tablet form, diood's Sarsaparilla is now put up in chocolated tablets called Sarsataba, as wall as in the usual liquid form. LANDSCAPE GARDENING.

Subject Every Hims Lover Should Give Ar ention

By J. R. Shinn, Professor of Horticulture Experiment Station, Moscow.

Most of the West is new country, therefore it is not surprising that com-paratively few dwellings and farmsteads within her boundaries are surrounded by attractively arranged plantings of trees, flowers and shrubs. Naturally, the attention of most citizens of this great commonwealth has been confined to the one idea of money making; per-haps the place has been mortraged and every effort has been bent to relieve this condition; or, some may have set a certain standard of money accumula-tion and have devoted their energies to working toward this goal. The result of these conditions has been that of setting as de the real beautifying of home grounds as a secondary consideration Another very prevalent reason why people neglect this all-important matter, is found in the fact that scarcely one person in a thousand steps aside and gives the matter adequate thought. Although one may appreciate the attractive places of others, still the idea of making his own place equally attrac-tive is far from the imagination. A third class of people are those who really love the touch which nature gives the home surroundings, but from lack of forethought and systematic planning their efforts fall far short of uccess. All of these classes of homemakers can profitably devote some at-tention to this subject, commonly known as "landscape gardening," and its application to homes of our country. The ultimate aim of all landscape gardening, whether conducted on a small or on a large scale, should be to present a pleasing picture. In other words, landscape gardening may be de-fined as the art of arranging and group-ing trees, shrubs and flowers in such a manner that a picture of undeniable beauty prevails from season to season. It is not enough that the material chosen for the plantings should give an attractive display for a single season, such as the painter places upon his canvas, but the selection should go farther, presenting material that will give increasing variety and alluring beauty for each day, each week and ach month. From this statement of the subject it is quite evident that the landscape gardener who wields the tools which nature places at his disposal occupies a position on equal footing with the artist who wields the brush in transferring these pictures to the canvas. Yet it is quite possible for most of us to play the part of the former, even though it be in a very limited manner. As many painters are imitators to a great degree, if one should imitate the works of others in the arranging of plants, he would be committing no unpardonable sin. In fact, this latter method of procedure is likely to prove the most fruitful means for the average person to employ; at any rate, it will serve ad-mirably for the purpose of giving an idea of the kinds of plants to select and the grouping methods most pleasing to the eye.

On the other hand, it is necessary that the person who is to become the amateur landscape gardener should un-derstand some of the prime essentials and common sense rules of this art.
Where shall the flowers be placed?
Shall the trees and shrubs come in the middle of the lawn or shall they find a more appropriate location in some other point? Is it good taste to make walks and roads in curves? These and many other questions naturally arise in the minds of those who are carefully prospecting in this subject. It therefor behooves us to get some working idea of these various topics. Every ome-lover should give ample attention to this subject.
