THE BROOK TROUT GROWN IN CAPTIVITY

trouble the pools are mink and birds—herons and kingfishers principally. Mr. Diegel and his son set traps for the mink and to keep the birds away the pools are covered with a wire netting.

Mr. Diegel has been a resident of Agawam for 32 years, but he went into the fish business only two years ago. This is the first season he has had fish to market. He is making plans to extend his plant and in a few years hopes to make a big thing of it. He has an ideal location for a hatchery with plenty of water and room to extend his pools.

The state hatcheries do not sell fish for commercial purposes. If they stock a stream for a man the public may fish in that stream. If a man wishes to keep a private stream he must buy his fish of a private dealer. And it is this fact that makes the business of selling live fish profitable to the private fish hatcheries. No one may sell or offer for sale a fish caught with hook or line in a stream. The only fish that may be sold are those that are raised by private hatcheries. It is this fact that makes trout scarce in the market. The season for trout extends from April to August. During the season the private hatchery owners may sell dead fish over six inches long. In February and March they may sell those that are nine inches long. Live fish may be sold at any time and Mr. Diegel has already sold several thousand fish to men in Springfield and vicinity. When they are shipped alive they are carried in cans filled with water, but the water should be kept cool.

Rev. D. D. Vaughan, of Chicago, who estimates that a child costs its parents from $3,000 to $5,000, says that "when a boy reaches the age of 21 his father should present him with a bill for the amount it has cost to raise him. Whether the boy ever pays the bill or not makes no difference. He is taught a lesson that he probably will never forget.—Baltimore News.

That there is plenty of room to spread out in this country is demonstrated by the fact that of the 88,000,000 population fully one-third of it is confined to the original thirteen states. If the other thirty-three states were equally densely populated the United States would have a billion or more inhabitants.

A Japanese Strawberry Omelet.

"A Japanese cook taught me the other day how to make a strawberry omelet," says Fannie Merritt Farmer in Woman's Home Companion for June. "Wash and pick over one pint of strawberries. Cut in halves, put in an earthen bowl, and add one third of a cupful of powdered sugar, one half teaspoonful of vanilla, one table-spoonful of water and a few grains of salt. Let stand in a warm place fifteen minutes. Beat eight eggs slightly and add one half cupful of cream, two table-spoonfuls of sugar and one half teaspoonful of salt.

Put two table-spoonfuls of butter in a hot omelet-pan, and when melted, pour in the egg mixture. As it cooks, prick and pick up with a fork until the whole is of a creamy consistency. Place on a hotter part of the range, that it may brown quickly underneath. Before folding and turning on a hot platter add one half the prepared strawberries; sprinkle with two teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar, and pour around the remaining strawberries. The strawberries may also be used with the ordinary French omelet recipe."

THE CALIFORNIA BUILDING AT A-Y-P. EXPOSITION, SEATTLE.

California's handsome building is one of the very striking structures on the grounds of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition. It is in the old Spanish Mission type of architecture encountered so frequently in Southern California, and the detail of its front has attracted the attention of artists and architects from all over the country.

In the building every county of the golden state will have an exhibit. California, from Siskiyou to San Diego, has shown as much enthusiasm for the Exposition as has Washington itself.
