Nature as a Healer.

A great, broad, consoling and fundamental fact remains that in a large majority of diseases which attack humanity under 90 per cent of the unfavorable influences which affect us nature will effect a cure if not too much interfered with. As the old proverb has it, "A man at 40 is either a fool or a physician," and Nature is a good deal over 40 and has never been accused of lacking intelligence.-Woods Hutchinson, M. D., in Delineator.

SUGGESTION AND CHILDREN.

To Assume the Existence of Vice

Often to Produce It. While we are all constantly under its influence, the child is more susceptible to suggestion than the adult, since its ideas are more spontaneous and without the critical faculty. That's the conclusion reached by Dr. Daniel P. MacMillan, director of the child Every shiftless man is a liar; he study department of Chicago's Board Education. Dr. MacMillan, who has lectured and written extensively on the subject of suggestion as applied to education, states emphatical-

"All education should be directed to this end, to convince the child that he is capable of good and incapable to save money, ninety-five will make of evil in order to render him actually so; to persuade him that he has a strong will in order to give him strength of will; to make him believe he is morally free and master of him-

Made by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass. or that good quality in them to induce them to exert themselves to justify that opinion. To assume in them depraved sentiments, to reproach them undeservedly, to treat them badly, is to produce the contrary result. It has been justly said that the art of managing the young consists, before anything else, in assuming them to be as good- as they wish themselves to be. If a hypnotic subject is persuaded he and honorable achievements almost is a pig he straightway wallows and grunts like a pig. The same happens in the case of those who theoretically think themselves of no more worth than a pig; their practice must necessarily offer points of correspondence with their theory.

"On the other hand, to believe in the wickedness of any one is, as a rule, to make him more wicked than he is. Every statement made aloud upon the mental state of a child immediately plays the role of a suggestion: This child is naughty; he is idle; he will not do this or that. How many vices are thus developed not by hereditary fatality but by ill-advised education! To assume the existence of vice is often to produce it. We must there-fore say to the child: 'You did not really wish to do that; but see how others would interpret your action if they did not know you.

"His confidence in those around him ought to stifle his innate timidity.
