The Bible school of the Methodist church is increasing in attendance and interest. One hundred and fifty five were present last Sabbath morning against ninety-three on the same date a year ago. H. R. Godard, of Fourth Street, came into our office this morning and gave us a sample of his raising of celery. This is, we believe, as fine a specimen as we have ever seen. The large white stalks measure eighteen to twenty inches in length and are crisp and almost brittle as an icicle and of rich and delicious flavor that would put the finish on a Thanksgiving turkey to a King's taste. This is another instance which emphasizes the possibilities of our part of the valley.

The workers of the Methodist church have in preparation a splendid program for next Sabbath. Public worship at 11 with sermon by pastor. Subject: "Maud Picked Fruit." A good one is told on C. Beals, the Harness Man, of this city. The story is that he was ready to start for a hunt not very long ago and having all ready called out Mrs. Beals to see him get a nice start with all his Nimrod's paraphernalia as he bestrode his favorite mount. Somehow, and for some inexplicable reason things seemed to take a sudden turn, even Beals himself, as old Dobbins or Maud, as the case may be, proceeded to do some funny business. Well, to make a long story short, Paul Revere's ride would have been put to shame by that of Beals from the front gate to a location down near the barn when the rider and animal parted company, the former soaring high in the air, then going gracefully plunk into the spring, leaving only his feet exposed.

The deceased arrived here not long since from Texas where the entire family had suffered from typhoid and other sickness, and they came here for a change, but her sickness terminated in death in spite of the kind efforts of neighbors and the skill of the physician. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn the loss of a dear companion and loving mother.

Green, a farmer who lives near Latham, had the misfortune while working at carpentering in Eugene last week to sustain a broken leg which would have delayed him greatly in his fall work, except for the fact that several of his farmer friends came in and plowed his grain, leaving him in good shape for the winter.
