As it appears that there is a general awakening of interest in the raising of berries, the best food on earth, we give the following from an exchange which should be read with interest. Owing to the long strawberry season in the Willamette valley, in fact all over western Oregon, those who do not live near enough to a good sized city that would insure them a market for the whole season while fresh, and who could not afford to go into the canning business may find relief in the drying process with good profit. The clipping reads as follows:

"Dried strawberries is a new crop soon to become of commercial importance in many Western states, according to reports made to the Department of Commerce and Labor. A berry grower of the state of Washington has discovered a sun-drying process for strawberries which has proved entirely successful, and samples of the dried product received in Washington appear to bear out the statement that within a few years many sections of the West, heretofore depending on the profits from strawberries which could only be shipped in season, will benefit from being able to dry this fruit in large quantities and realize satisfactory results."

The answer to "What is Success?" was given by a Kansas City woman in the following words:

"He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and gave the best he had."

The Great Western Sugar Company of Denver, Colorado, is offering a prize of $10,000 to the inventor of a practicable sugar beet puller and topper to meet the demands of a committee of judges of that company. The device must not require more than four horses to the row of beets, and must pull and top them, separating the roots and tops, leaving them convenient to load. It must not damage neither the beets nor tops and must not cost to exceed $300.

Senator Chamberlain has our thanks for public documents including a bulletin from the census bureau on the state of Oregon which contains much useful information concerning our state. This bulletin shows that Oregon's increase in population during the last census decade to be 259,229 or 62.7 per cent. This is a good showing but we have reason to believe that the increase will greatly exceed that figure in the next ten years.

The last hard problem Senator Lorimer has been up against since being expelled from the U. S. Senate was a telephone pole. He was severely shaken up and stunned when his auto struck the pole while going at a good speed.

Port Orford will again hold an "agate carnival" this year, a feature of which will be a reproduction of the Indian fight which gave Battle Rock its name. The carnival is to be held early in August.

The 25th of this month has been set for the Oregon state convention of the Progressive Republican (Roosevelt) party.

Health, Hustle and Prosperity to be Found in Oregon.

After careful study of the problem set forth in your telegram, were I graduating today from college, East, West or South, I would head straight for the great, undeveloped Northwest.

I would by my ticket for Portland, Ore. I would spend my first week in that splendid prototype of our old, conservative and intellectual but withal courageous and hustling New England capital of a half century ago. While in Portland I would haunt the reportorial departments of the daily newspapers, the ever-welcoming rooms of the numerous business clubs and the booming departments of the great railroads and navigation lines centering in that superb Pacific metropolis.

Then I would light out into the modern paradise of happiness and dollars, the virgin interior of that wonderful State, a world in itself, containing to spare and then lots more of everything that makes for health, hustle, prosperity and contentment for man, woman and child. If I were possessed of $20,000 to $50,000 capital, in a twelvemonth I would telegraph back to Bradstreet and Dun to mark my rating $125,000, and then three twelvemonths later I would wire them to make it from half to three-quarters of a million.

If I had only my carfare, Bible, dictionary and fountain pen, I would send word to the old folks to watch out for the Christmas coming of the old home mortgage lifter, and I would bet my pal dog, for of course I'd have him along, against a pouch of tobacco that when Christmas came I wouldn't be making excuses for not coming East. Details? Bosh!

Argue Canal Bill

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Railroad control of the Panama canal, rights of American ships to free tools and form of government under which the canal management is to be placed, were subjects of directly opposing arguments today from Senators Brandegee, of Connecticut and Townsend of Michigan. Brandegee urged all ships be admitted to the canal at definite tool charge with no favors to American vessels. If the railroad owned ships abused the privileges congress should then place offending lines under jurisdiction of the interstate commission. Townsend urged legislation to prevent railroads getting any grip on the canal.

Oxford's completion of a thousand years of history as a chartered university merited something more than the perfunctory celebration given it. The event is a notable for all the English-speaking race, not only as an occasion for recalling the great deeds of the past but as one for noting the bright promise of another thousand years of liberty and progress with the same venerable institution as one of the centres of its learning and its light.—The New York World.
