GOVERNOR WEST IS A BOOSTER

road & Navigation Company, both Harriman lines, held the state bottled up for their future use. Its farms, its fields, its forests and its mines lay at their feet, waiting their caprice. This condition has been changed by the coming of competing roads until now the hills are being tunneled and the valleys are being gridironed by steam and electric lines. With their coming the big farms are merging into the smaller holdings, scientific farming is taking the place of the old methods of the pioneer and the whole State is teeming with new life, new energy and advancing prosperity.

Oregon is one of the foremost lumber producing States in the Union and her supply as it stands today is good for many years without taking into consideration a system of reforestation. Her mines are in their infancy, but fortunes await their development. The fame of her apples and her pears is known across the Atlantic, and she is known as the world's greatest hop yard. Her wheat fields vie with those of the Dakotas and Minnesota. Oregon wool is known wherever wool buyers go and Oregon cattle feed the epicures of the East.

And yet, in the face of it all, there are thousands of acres of as fertile land as can be found waiting for the touch of the developing hand.

We have magnificent cities and upspringing towns and a country of wonderful fertility. We can take our visitors through valleys along the level of the sea or we can climb rugged mountains to the upland plateaus where the irrigated farms and orchards grow their grains and fruits in the endless sunshine. We can show you desert and oasis, upland and lowland, mountain and meadow. We can point you to rivers and mountain streams whose unharassed waters carry power sufficient to turn the wheels of a hundred cities. We can sail you for hundreds of miles on the great Columbia, over whose bosom and along whose banks the products of an empire seek their outlet to markets across the Pacific. And over it all we can show a climate as varied as our scenery. If you want the green of Ireland and the rain-sweetened woodlands of England, we can lead you through the Willamette Valley. Should you want the sunny hills of France, we can take you to where the grapes and the peaches grow on the banks of the Rogue River to the south. We can show you mountains whose heads are always white and lakes with forests turned to stone a thousand feet beneath the surface of their waters.

With such a state it is not a question of whether the year will bring prosperity, but of how much prosperity the twelve months will bear.

BERRY CROP PAYS. HOW TO PLANT.

Two hundred and six dollars off one-half an acre of loganberries, is the result reported to the Monitor by a grower of the fruit this year. This return shows a fine profit on the investment. Light clay soil, well cultivated and in open country, is the best to be secured for this berry. Plant the slips in six-foot rows, and about 12 feet between vines, to get best results. This will require about 605 plants to the acre, and it is estimated that 2 1-2 cents is a reasonable figure at which to get the plant. This industry is a new one in Polk County, the first large acreage planted being that north of Independence, near Derry, which is being made into a loganberry farm.—Independence Monitor.

Biography.

Joseph Higber Sharp was born in Hanover, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1834. He resided at several different towns in Ohio up to 1848, when he moved to Missouri. The route taken was down the Ohio, thence up the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, his conveyance being a flat boat and his destination Rising Sun, Indiana. Later he went to Wayne City, Missouri, thence by wagon to Blue Springs. He started across the plains to Oregon in 1852, with wagons and oxtteams, his route from Blue Springs being up the Republican Fork, over to the Platte, Fort Kearney, thence up the Platte by Chimney Rock and Fort Laramie, through the Black Hills, up the Sweet Water, passing Devil's Gate, through the Narrows, over South Pass, across a 40-mile desert to Green River, down Bear River, by Soda Springs, then across to Snake River, down south side of Snake River, to Fort Boise, and through Grand Rounde, thence down the south side of the Columbia River to the Dalles, over the Cascade Mountains to the Barlow Road, over which he crossed the Cascades to Oregon City in 1852, the family first settling in Yamhill county, later moving to Lane county and taking up a donation claim in the Grand Prairie country northwest of Eugene. The son, Joseph, was married in 1865 to Phoebe White and about 1870 moved to the Cottage Grove country, of which he has ever since been a resident.
