Entered as second-class matter January 25, 1913, at the post office at Cottage Grove, Oregon, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Commercial Clubs Expanding.

Missouri commercial clubs are now federated. Associations of active men in small towns and large cities were content not long ago to have their usefulness limited by the corporate boundaries. They thought only of and worked only for the advancement of purely local interests. The appearance of a folder under the auspices of the federated commercial clubs of Missouri illustrates very clearly how greatly the vision of these organizations has broadened in the last few years, how far they have traveled from the parochial view. It is quite proper that the step marked by this folder should be made the occasion of the serious comment bestowed upon the trend of the commercial club movement in Missouri, says the Monitor. One might go farther and extend this comment to the commercial organizations of the great majority of the states. But in Missouri is shown concretely how men in active and big affairs are breaking out of narrow environment and grasping the larger thought. The folder referred to tells simply that the federated commercial clubs are striving to have a "farm adviser" attached to each association in the 114 Missouri counties. The meaning of this is that to the town and city worker the farm worker is no longer an "outsider," that what concerns the town and city concerns the country, that it is impossible to differentiate the interests of the urban and the rural dweller—as impossible as it is to separate the interests of one community of the state, the nation or the world from the interests of all. Not in Missouri only, but everywhere, men are taking the high ground of common welfare and universal brotherhood, with all the individual and communal responsibility these involve.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. have declared regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the common stock, payable Aug. 15 to holders of record July 31. How much do Cottage Grove patrons get out of these big dividends?

There is nothing snide about what we do, doubt not, the statement for work proves true. We can give you a lift in this life, not only you but your family and wife.
