SEEKING TO SAVE DOOMED WOMAN

Mrs. Wakefield Sentenced to Be Hanged.

MAY ESCAPE THE GALLOWS.

Various Organizations and Prominent Women in Connecticut Protes. Against Extreme Penalty—She, With Aid of a Man, Brought About the Death of Her Husband.

Hartford, Conn.—Aroused as they never have been before, Connecticut women of every walk in life are shouldering the burden of preventing the state from inflicting the death penalty upon Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield convicted as an accomplice in the murder of her husband.

From every conceivable vantage point wives and daughters of prominent men, suffragists and women opposed to their sex exercising the right of franchise are attacking as disgraceful ful and unwarranted the carrying out of the court edict that Mrs. Wakefield shall be hanged.

From every corner of the state the protests of the women are being voiced in the form of publicly circulated petitions to which many thousands of names are being signed daily, in public campaigns and in personal demands being made upon members of the state board of pardons, legislators and jurists. Although Mrs. Wakefield still is in a cell in the prison death house, no word yet has been received by her indicating what will be the result of the unique crusade.

If Mrs. Wakefield dies for the murder of her husband, in the actual commission of which she was not accused of having taken a hand, she will be the first woman put to death in the state since 1786.

Connecticut's leniency toward women who have been convicted of murder is explained in part by its efforts to atone for its unsavory record in Colonial days, when six women were burned or hanged as witches. In 1745 Elizabeth Shaw, a feeble minded girl, was hanged on her father's testimony that she had killed her infant child. She was executed after she had ridden a mile to the scaffold seated on her coffin and crying aloud to be saved. But since Connecticut became a state only one woman has been legally put to death within its limits.

Mrs. Wakefield is twenty-four years old and is one of six children of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Webster of Middlebury, an uncultured, but honest, couple, who for years have eked a bare living out of a rocky farm.

The daughter received practically no education, and she was only seventeen when she was married to Wakefield, a Bristol farm hand. She became housekeeper for James Plew, a Middlebury farmer.

Plew and Wakefield soon quarreled about her. Wakefield was found slain last June. Plew confessed the deed, but he and Mrs. Wakefield blamed each other for plotting the murder so that they could be married. Plew, who has a wife and child, and Mrs. Wakefield, who has two children, have been sentenced to be hanged on March 4, 1914.

It has been stated in the Connecticut press that the vote of the board must be unanimous to commute a sentence, but the law was changed four years ago to make a favorable vote of five members effective.

Mrs. Wakefield's children are with her parents. The boy, who is six years old, and the girl, who is four, know nothing of their parents' fate, and they daily say to their grandmother, "Mamma will be home today."

The fact that many women have been convicted of single handed and premeditated murder in Connecticut in the last half century, and that all have escaped the death penalty, and that Mrs. Wakefield is not even charged with a part in the actual killing of her husband, has incited a widespread revolt against the decree of the extreme penalty in her case.

MAIL COURTSHIP WINS.

Postal Cards Unite Couple Whose Ages Are Seventy-six and Seventy-one.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—After courting five months through the mails and meeting his bride only five weeks ago, Joseph W. Oliver, seventy-one years old, of Sweet Valley, Pa., and Mrs. Mary Van Ault, seventy-six years old, of this city, were united in marriage here by Alderman John P. Pollock.

Frank Lewis, a truck farmer, was the matchmaker. After the death of Mrs. Van Ault's husband five months ago Lewis learned that she was heartbroken. One day he suggested that she marry again, declaring that he knew an aged man out in the country who would make her a good husband.

Then Lewis saw Oliver and suggested marriage to him. Oliver became interested at once and asked for the woman's name and address. The next day he mailed a colored postal to her, giving his name and rural address. In a short time he received a colored postal from Mrs. Van Ault, and then he ventured to write a letter. The correspondence led to a meeting and the marriage followed.

ON A GOOSEBERRY JAG.

New Fruity Intoxicant Produces a Great Wallowing Power.

Fort Collins, Colo.—The weird dreams of the abstemious drinker have nothing on the peculiar effects of a new kind of jag inducer which has been discovered by some Russians who live near Loveland.

This new booze is a fermented gooseberry juice and while under its influence Henry Moser, a small Russian, whipped Peter Kreig and George Addison, both of them six feet tall.

The battle took place at the home of Henry Schaffer, and in police court Moser gave a vivid description of the power he felt and told the court he was only sorry his legs were too short to make it possible for him to overtake Addison, who ran away before he was entirely knocked out.

PELICAN SWALLOWS TWO PET PIGEONS

Birds Rescued Alive by Central Park Zoo Keeper.

New York.—A highly excited young woman ran into the office of Bill Snyder, head animal keeper at Central park.

He saw the look of terror on her face and wondered if a lion had broken loose. He demanded, "What's the trouble?"

"The pelican!" she shrieked. "The pelican!"

"What's the matter with the pelican?" Snyder asked. "What's it done?" "The pelican! It's swallowed two pigeons! I just saw it swallow them. Come quickly. It might swallow some more of them."

Snyder laughed. "That happens about twice a month," said he.

"But the poor birds! What will become of them?"

The girl was almost sobbing. "Come with me," Bill said soothingly, "and I'll show you what becomes of the poor birds."

He led the way to the cage where the pelicans and other great billed birds are kept.

Snyder was joined by other keepers, and the cage was surrounded.

Sure enough a pelican's immense bill was bulging out as though the bird had swallowed a football.

"Are you ready?" called Snyder.

"All ready," replied the other keepers.

"El Capitan, El Capitan!" shouted the keepers until the park echoed with their cries.

El Capitan, who was the pelican, opened his bill and a pigeon flew out.

"Goody, goody!" screamed the girl.

Again the keepers shouted, "El Capitan, El Capitan!" Again the pelican glanced around and opened his bill. A second pigeon fluttered out and flew away.

The girl clapped her hands with joy and asked: "Aren't they hurt? Why aren't they hurt?"

"That's easy," answered Snyder.

"You see the feathers are dry, and a bird cannot swallow a dry, feathery substance. That pelican tries to gulp those pigeons so often they're getting used to it. All we have to do when he tries it is to frighten him by shouting his name as loud as we can. That makes him open his mouth."

The amazed girl left the park. "It's true as gospel," said Snyder afterward. "Up to date that pelican's never swallowed any of our pigeons, and I don't think he'll succeed very soon either."

LEAN MEN WICKED, HE SAYS.

"Laughter, Fat Man's Gift, the Mark of Humanity," Quayle Says.

Washington.—Bishop Quayle of the Methodist church has compiled some statistics on fat and lean men. He said:

"Man, when he is lean, takes himself too seriously and squeaks when he walks. He is wicked and has not half the chance the fat man has of being good.

"Laughter, the gift of the fat man, is the mark of humanity.

"Men have not so much to laugh at, but women can laugh easier, for they have a subject—to wit, the men."

PHILIPPINE SAVAGES.

The Uncouth Tingians Are Fond of Ornaments and Gay Colors.

There are many strange, uncivilized people among the Asiatic Americans of the Philippine Islands.

The Tingians are a very uncouth tribe of savages. Their head women have their arms almost completely covered with strings of beads, wound so as to form beautiful and striking designs. A long, heavy string of beads is also twisted around the hair and hangs down the back like a braid. The skirt of these head women is white, with a blue border, and the waist is of light yellow. They smoke pipes of solid silver, ornamented with bangles, in the bowls of which pieces of cigar are inserted.

The typical young Tingian chieftain wears a stiff collar of beads and a gayly colored calico shirt, over which is a sort of scarf trimmed with many silver coins. The members of this tribe are very fond of silver. They make a large number of finger rings from silver coins, and each man usually has from five to ten of these rings about his person, but not necessarily on his fingers.

The Tingians are fond of a peculiar dance. The music is produced by beating with the palms of the hands on "gansas" or tom-toms. The dancers, a man and a woman, with arms outstretched, circle about each other in a spiral, the man pursuing the woman with a quick, jerky step. As they approach the center of the spiral he suddenly swoops upon her, when she always eludes him by suddenly darting out of his reach.—Forrest Clark in Leslie's.

SLEEP AND REST.

Every Organ of the Human Body Has Its Periods of Repose.

All the organs of life rest in some way or other. The heart has an interval of rest between each combined act of contraction and expansion and the beginning of a fresh act. Between each expiration of the lungs and the succeeding inspiration there is a period of repose. Physiologists have calculated that the heart reposes during about one-fourth of the time. Certain of the other organs suspend their activity in part during sleep.

Old physiologists supposed that sleep was caused by the pressure of the blood on the brain. But modern physiology, with a tendency to regard the brain as the origin of all force and of all functions of the body, inclines to the view that sleep is caused by a withdrawal of blood from the brain.

As a rule, the larger the brain the more sleep it requires. Webster went to bed at 9 o'clock and rose at 5. General Grant used to say during his campaigns, "I can do nothing without nine hours' sleep."

A curious trait has marked men of arge brains—that of sleeping at will. Bonaparte used to throw himself on the ground and go to sleep within a space of two minutes. Pitt was a sound sleeper and slept night after night in the house of commons while his colleagues watched the debate and roused him when it was necessary that he should speak.—New York Herald.
