Why has the United States senate no committee of ways and means?

The constitution says all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the house of representatives and the senate has no need of a committee of that name. The senate committee on finance has charge of all business in that body connected with the public revenue, taxation, banking, currency, etc.

Where suffrage has been granted to women, does the privilege extend to the presidential vote?

It does in some states, but in others only to local, municipal or school elections.

Must I make a return if I receive an income tax blank from the internal revenue collector's office even if my income is less than the required amount?

You need not make a return unless your income is in excess of $3,000 (except in case you are a married man and you and your wife have a combined income of over $4,000).

What is the reason for the difference in the numbering of the Fahrenheit and the centigrade thermometers?

The difference is in principle that between circular measure and the neat simplicity of the decimal system. When Fahrenheit had found that his thermometer was capable of giving him a means of measuring heat the necessity for a scale presented itself. He was able to establish two constants of temperature—that at which a mixture of salt and snow melts at one end of the scale, that at which water boils at sea level establishes the other. Evidently with some reference to the fact that in circular measure the maximum distance possible to measure from one point to another is 180 degrees, he scaled 180 equal parts between these two limits. He scaled the thermometer below his freezing point to its reading on a winter day colder than the oldest inhabitant could remember to have experienced, and here he established his zero. It chanced to be 32 degrees below his freezing point. The centigrade on the other hand establishes its zero at freezing point and 100 degrees at the boiling point. These constants are selected because they may be so conveniently reproduced at any time and therefore obviate the necessity of maintaining an officially scaled standard, as must be the case with measures of length and capacity.

Please give the name of the vessel built by the United States to be driven by electricity, to serve as a collier for ships at sea.

The boat to which you refer is the Jupiter. It was built at the Mare Island navy yard last year, the first electrically driven seagoing vessel and the largest ever laid down on the Pacific coast. It is possibly too soon to tell whether she is a success or not.

Please give quotation in full, "He that hath no music in his soul?"

From Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," act 5, scene 1:

The man that hath no music in himself Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils.

Runaways.

"This paper," said Languld Lewis, "tells about a horse runnin' away with a woman and she was laid up for six weeks."

"That ain't so worse," rejoined Bonst-fun Benjamin. "A friend of mine once ran away with a horse, and he was laid up for six years."—New York Globe.

Some Kind of Rock.

"Say, waiter," said the traveling man to the hotel waiter, "what kind of chicken do you call this?"

"That's a Plymouth Rock, I believe," replied the waiter.

"I'm glad it has some claim to historical mention," said the man. "I thought it was just an ordinary cobblestone."—Pittsburgh Press.

HE WAS A PERFECT LADY.

And So Bewitching That Suffrage Converts and a Proposal Came His Way. The famous Winsted (Conn.) correspondent submits the following:

Clad in his wife's finest raiment, with a corset to give his form a feminine appearance, and crowned with a plume bedecked hat, Lester Barnes went out on a lark and carried the impersonation so well that his best friends did not recognize him, and he received a proposal of marriage.

After start up customers in Case's drug store, where he purchased cig-rettes and lighted one, he visited a club where no women are admitted. He is a member, and, using his key to get in through a side door, he walked into the parlor, where he introduced himself to his friends as a suffrage campaigner.

All present except two signed up. The two were officers, and they politely asked the "suffragist" to leave after showing "her" the house rules.

Barnes disappeared as mysteriously as he entered, and not until the next day did the members know the identity of their unbidden guest.

TWINS ALL THROUGH LIFE.

Nathan B. Yerger and Elbert E. Landis were boy chums. They entered college together, were roommates for four years, graduated in the same class, got churches at the same time. Both married teachers. Their brides had entered normal school together, been roommates, graduated together, got teaching assignments the same day.

The clergymen proposed about the same time, were married the same day, took their honeymoon trips together.

Recently the stars presented twins to the Yergers. Now the Landises have twins.

Both sets were born in the same private room at the Lancaster (Pa.) general hospital.

Three Liars

A Story For Easter

By F. A. MITCHEL

When our troops came home from Cuba and, nearly all sick, were unloaded from transports on the eastern end of Long Island the camps that held them were thronged with persons who had come to find relatives or friends. One of these, an old lady with an anxious look on her face, stopped at a tent before which sat an officer in a camp chair and asked in a tremulous voice:

"Can you tell me if my boy has come?"

The officer rose, took off his hat respectfully and said:

"What regiment did your boy belong to, madam?"

"He was with the —th Pennsylvania."

"Come with me, and I will see if I can get the information you wish."

He led the way to a tent wherein an officer was writing.

"Make your inquiries here," he said and left her.

"I'm trying to find my boy, Henry Ashurst," said the old lady.

The officer looked serious. He remembered having the name of Henry Ashurst on a list of killed and wounded. He hunted in his desk for a certain paper and when he found it ran his eye over the list of names. His expression became still more serious, but he bent his face down so that it was concealed under the rim of his hat. He had found the name of Henry Ashurst, but had not the heart to tell the mother what list it was in.

"Your son hasn't come up from Cuba yet, madam. He wasn't very well when the last transport sailed."

"Do you know what his trouble was?" asked the old lady, tears starting into her eyes.

"Some of those fevers they have down there, I believe."

"Is he very ill?"

"Well, I couldn't tell you about that. There's the regimental surgeon's tent over there; you might inquire of him."

The old lady walked feebly over to the tent designated, found the surgeon and asked the same questions she had asked the adjutant. The doctor looked down upon the anxious face and turned toward just as the other had done. "Henry Ashurst!" he said as if trying to recollect. "There was a soldier in the hospital of that name, I think, but I can't exactly recall his case."

"Was he very sick?"

"Oh, no; not very sick. I think it was a simple flesh wound in the leg."

"Do you think he will come on the next transport?"

"No doubt of it, madam; no doubt of it."

The old lady went away. The adjutant saw her go and walked over to the surgeon.

"I couldn't do my duty by that old lady, could you? I found his name on a list of mortally wounded. I told his mother he had a fever."

"I remembered him in the hospital as one for whom there was no hope of recovery. I lied about it too. I told his mother he had a slight flesh wound. I only know what I have told you, so I took the benefit of the doubt."

Every day the old lady visited the camp, and every day the adjutant and surgeon either told her more lies or repeated the old ones. The ship bearing her son never came to Montauk Point, and when the last tent was struck she ceased her visits and her inquiries.

The winter passed and no one had the courage to tell the mother that her boy would not come back to her. They all excused themselves on the ground that no record of the death and burial of Private Henry Ashurst had been found. But when the war closed every one connected with the army was in a hurry to get away from the heat, the sickness, the death attending an army in a tropical climate in summer.

Until some one would assure her that her son was dead the poor mother hoped. She was very religious and prayed fervently that her boy might be restored to her. One morning in April when the sun, shining warm, was opening the leaves typifying the resurrection shortly to be celebrated at Easter the old lady went to her rector and said she had a feeling that Henry would come home on Easter Sunday.

"Do you think," she said, "that this feeling has been sent me by Providence?"

"Quite likely," was the reply. "I believe that Providence often sends us forecasts of what is about to happen."

He had no more doubt that Henry Ashurst's bones were moldering in Cuba than that the earth turned on its axis.

"I'm so glad you think so!" added the mother, moving away, while the clergyman looked after her, not knowing whether to consider himself a liar or one who had done a kindness.

At dawn on Easter morning there was a loud rapping on the door of Mr. Ashurst's house.

"He's come!" she said, getting out of bed, and without stopping to put on a wrapper she went downstairs, opened the door and was clasped in the arms of her son.

"Oh, Harry, where have you been all this time?"

"I was left in Cuba. When I got well I had forgotten who I was. Since then I have been going about as another person. Some time ago a surgeon removed a piece of my skull, and here I am."
